no sugar beets are grown. This means that the farmer who An ideal camping ground is to puts one-fourth his farm in sugar beets will have just as much wheat, potatoes and other crops as he did on his entire fishing reported from this stream farm without sugar beets, thereby lessening the cost of production and increasing the profits and purchasing power of the farmer."

The above words are taken from a speech of Oswald Wilson of San Francisco, editor of the Sugar Beet Journal of that city, delivered before the Chamber of Commerce of the United States at a recent meeting held in Los Angeles.

It used to be said that "you cannot eat your cake and have it too," but that saying was invented before we knew so much about sugar beets.

Most Statesman readers know that the chemical elements of sucrose (sugar) are carbon, hydrogen and oxygen. The carbon comes from the air and the hydrogen and oxygen comes from the water-that is, sugar comes from the wind linen industry is the biggest of that blows where it listeth and the rain that falls from heaven the mall. on the place beneath.

Mr. Wilson, in proof of his statement that "sugar beets are one of the most profitable of crops," quotes the official the boys took the county examinrecords of the returns per acre of the North Platte, Nebraska, reclamation project in 1922. The returns are the average gross returns per acre. Alfalfa hay yielded $13.62 per acre; beans, $25.03 per acre; onions, $66 per acre; wheat, $14.74 again on June 12. per acre; all the crops an average of $21.74 per acre, while sugar beets yielded an average of $84.32 per acre.

The yields in California are greater. Mr. Wilson reports

Five farmers in Oxnard, California, district, in 1923, produced $79,952 worth of sugar from 128 acres, an average of $623.84 per acre, and their returns from the beets ran from $297.45 to $355.19 per acre.

It is presumed that the Nebraska figures represent about the average for the country. The overhead would be lower than the average for the country in the Willamette valley ..

not seem to be lack of home-pride or lack of willingness to buy home products, but it seems to be a lack of knowledge as to what is made and sold at home.

That in such cases it is generally the fault of the manufacturer and jobber. They work the outside trade and overlook the home trade.

That a display of products manufactured and a display of products sold by local jobbers would be a revelation to the people of the home city. That in most cities it would be a never ending source of surprise to learn to what an extent the home city has progressed in the ustrial growth. That jobbers and manufacturers exhibits should be held in every city. That they will show the diversity of their industries. That it will give prestige to local industries.

That it will thoroughly acquaint the citizens with every production of the home city.

Citizens should be made to realize the importance of home industries, what they mean to their city, and the importance of their huying home sold and home man-ufactured products.
