The cannery of the Producers' Canning and Packing company, North Commercial and Jefferson streets, is already running on gooseberries. They have been running for two or three days. They expect to commence on strawberries very soon.
The Hunt cannery, on Front street, will start on strawberries on Monday or Tuesday, and will also handle the gooseberries that are under contract.
The canneries of the Oregon Packing company, the Northwest Fruit Products company, the Stars Fruit Products company, and the West Salem cannery, will all be going some time next week, or at least around the first of June.
This makes six canneries for Salem this year.
There is a good deal of reliance about what the canneries that are not mutual are going to do about the surplus gooseberry crop. Their managers will not commit themselves, excepting to say that there is a large surplus from the pack of last year, and that it is not easy to sell.

T. A. Livesley & Co., who own and operate hop yards in the Salem district, including the best equipped hop yards in the world, employed irrigation in their Lake Brook yard, seven miles below Salem, last year.
They pumped the water from Clear lake, a million and a half gallons every 10 hours, and irrigated their 390 acre hop yard there.
They estimate that they increased the production of that yard last year by at least 25 per cent.
Their irrigation system there is intact; it is all ready to go, or can be made ready almost on the minute; but it is the opinion of Mr. Livesley that no irrigation for hops will be needed in the Willamette valley this year.
In the big yard that was irrigated last year, cultivation is going on with a view to conserving the moisture now in the ground, from the abundant showers that have already fallen during the present season.
T. A. Livesley & Co., have been growing in their own yards, about a million pounds of hops a year. They have since last year taken on another hop ranch, of 230 acres, near Corvallis.

An offer to officiate at all executions at the penitentiary for the low sum of $350 each time the service is performed has been received by Warden A. M. Dalrymple from a man in New Jersey, who requests that his name be withheld.
The writer admits that this is a very low price, but is making the special offer as he is desirous of coming to Oregon and visit with relatives along the coast.
Warden Dalrymple politely rejected the offer, saying that the state provides no extra funds for the performance of the unpleasant duty and that the work will be performed, whenever necessary by one of the guards or officers.
