

FINGER PRINT EXPERT SPEAKER AT LUNCHEON

ALL PERSONS TO BE RECORDED, SAYS J. S. MURRAY

Central Bureau Coming in Future; Various Classifications Are Explained

"It is only a matter of time until every one will be finger-printed and the results filed at a central bureau," declared J. S. Murray, fingerprint and Bertillon expert at the Oregon state penitentiary, who addressed members of the Salem Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

"I am in favor of a central fingerprint bureau being established, which will contain the record of every person in the community. Information about the birth and life of the individual can be filed with the finger prints, and the state compared with all important documents," declared the speaker.

"One of the most interesting talks of past weeks was given by Mr. Murray, who explained the mysteries of the whorls and loops of the markings of the finger tips. He brought out that there were three classifications by which the lines of the finger prints could be identified. They are the arch, the loop and the whorl or circle, each classification being divided and subdivided, making for a greater diversity of markings.

"The secret of the efficiency of the fingerprint method in detecting criminals is in the classification and filing of the records," he said. "Within two minutes a person is able to find a classification from a group of 100,000 records of finger prints, which is impossible under the old order of picture classification."

Mr. Murray gave several examples of how criminals were caught by the use of finger prints and how the smaller police office cooperated with the main bureaus in detecting criminals.

LOGANBERRY JUICE IS HELD FAVORITE DRINK

LARGE PORTLAND FIRM NOW HANDLING BEVERAGE

Instead of being down and out, loganberries are growing in popular favor not only with the canning trade, but now as a special new drink, according to Dr. J. E. Crothers of the Liberty district.

A year or so ago Dr. Crothers brought news of the new way of making a loganberry drink that was becoming a leader with a big firm in Cleveland, Ohio. In fact, with the new process of making a carbonated drink from loganberry juice, the Cleveland people had found the public more than anxious to drink loganberry juice, made from the pure juice.

And now comes news that Lipman, Wolfe and company of Portland has installed in a prominent place, one of the Humphrey loganberry juice dispensers and all who are inclined to learn just how fine a loganberry juice properly carbonated can taste, are urged to go to Lipman, Wolfe and company sometime and drink the real drink of the Gods, which is loganberry juice.

Dr. Crothers, who was instrumental in having Lipman, Wolfe and company place the Humphrey loganberry juice dispenser in such a favorable location on the main floor of the store, says this is the only machine made which uses pure loganberry juice in serving drinks.

Sacramento firms are also becoming interested in the serving of loganberry juice as offered by the new Humphrey dispenser. A firm interested in serving soft drinks in Sacramento, writes:

"I have just read with interest an article regarding the handling of loganberry juice and the experiment to be made in one of the Portland stores.

"I believe that this has wonderful possibilities, as I know what a delicious drink can be made of loganberry juice."

Many Veterans Making Poppies for Sale Soon

Scores of disabled and needy ex-service men, crippled heroes of Chemin des Dames and the Argonne, Chateau Thierry and Verdun, are busily at work in various cities throughout the United States making the thousands of Buddy Poppies for the annual national Poppy sale of the Veterans of Foreign Wars during the week of Memorial Day.

The majority of poppies for the national sale are being made in Boston, Massachusetts, where in a specially equipped V. F. W. poppy factory and in U. S. Veterans Hospital No. 44 a force of veterans are actively adding hundreds of poppies daily to the 2,500,000 quota for the local sale are being made within the state by the state's own war-veterans sons.

Old Salem Photograph Shows 8-Team Outfit

A picture showing the principal business buildings in Salem back in 1861 and '62, is on display at the Anderson sporting goods store. It shows the famous Durbin livery stable in the early days which was erected on the property occupied by the Waters' cigar store.

The picture shows an eight-team outfit, hooked up to a wagon which is pulling a band. There are a few residents in Salem who remember the days when the old building used to be standing, although the number present in the picture are not known.

ORIGINAL COMEDY WILL PLAY AT GRAND TONIGHT

CAST HEADED BY LAWRENCE D'ORSAY SAID BRILLIANT

"So This Is London" Contrasts American and English Characters

George M. Cohan never produced anything funnier than "So This Is London," the comedy with an international appeal, which Henry Duffy will offer to amusement lovers at the Grand theater tonight.

The plot has been cleverly conceived and is carried out in most logical fashion. It is based upon the misunderstandings on the part of Britishers regarding people and things American, and the Yankee's misconception of the Englishman's point of view when he visits London. It has proved just as amusing to the son of John Bull as to Uncle Sam's nephews right here at home.

The situations have a distinctly Cohanesque tinge. They are represented as exceedingly droll, the dialogue humorous and witty, and throughout the three acts there is said to be a vein of delicate satire that tickles the risibles in a delightful way. The contrast afforded by the characterizations of Sir Perry Beauchamp, a member of the British peerage, and Hiram Draper, an American captain of industry, forms the basis for much of the laughter with which the play abounds.

"So This Is London" comes here after a run in New York and Chicago with a cast headed by Lawrence D'Orsay, the original star, and production on a par with that seen there and with that originally presented on Broadway.

TUBERCULAR TESTS START IN COUNTY SOON

LAW CALLING FOR INSPECTION EFFECTIVE MAY 28

Family Cow Not Excluded; Strictly Beef Herds Not Subject to Test

The countrywide tests for tuberculosis in cattle will be started the first of June, it was announced by County Judge J. T. Hunt yesterday, following a meeting of the county veterinary board. The new law goes into effect on May 28.

Every dairy cow in the country must be tested for the disease, family cows not being exempt. In cases where beef cattle are running in the same pasture with dairy cattle, or are housed together, they also must undergo the test. Where beef herds do not come in contact with other cattle, they are not obliged to be tested.

A charge of 25 cents a head is made by the county for testing the cattle. This must be paid as soon as the inspector has finished with his test.

The tuberculosis test law was passed by the last legislature, and all counties west of the Cascade mountains are included in the statute, except those already having compulsory tubercular examinations.

The linen mills will mean fortunes to Salem people. The wise investor knows this, and invests accordingly.
