WASHINGTON BUILDING TO BE USED IN FALL

INCREASE DEMANDS RE-OPENING OF OLD SCHOOL

More Than 300 Pupils Can Be Accommodated Superintendent Tells Board

The old Washington school will be used next year for school purposes, according to the statement to the school board last night by George W. Hug, city superintendent of school. The increase in the number of school children is crowding the schools of the city, and it is necessary to make some provision to care for the situation.

Under the proposed change over 300 pupils can be cared for at the old Washington building, without much of a change in the number of teachers employed at present. It is proposed to secure a staff for the school by transferring members of the faculties of the adjoining schools to the old Washington building.

Part of the equipment is already on hand, although some repairs will have to be made, due to the damage resulting from the old building being occupied during the past season.

The linen mills will mean returns to Salem people. The wise inventor knows this, and invests accordingly.

MANY ALFALFA FIELDS ARE VISITED BY PARTY

OVER 30 FARMERS OF DISTRICT ARE INTERESTED

Farms Report Fine Yields With Little Work and Good Prices For Crops

Starting from Salem at 9 o'clock Tuesday morning representatives from the First National Bank, including F. A. Foerfler, the bank's farm advisor, and 30 Marion and Polk county farmers who have become deeply interested in the growing of alfalfa in this section, made a tour through various parts of both counties, inspecting a number of alfalfa farms.

Many farmers during this trip remarked time and again that the sight of these fields growing successfully wonderful crops of alfalfa was a revelation to them. The methods used by these successful growers were explained thoroughly to the visitors, and some highly important information was received from all of them.

At a luncheon held later at the Marion Hotel, William L. Teutsch, divisional superintendent from the Oregon Agricultural College, addressed the farmers on growing of alfalfa, and other important agricultural problems.

The talk was interesting and carried valuable information based on practical experience and long study in the growing of alfalfa.

Fields producing five and six tons to the acre and 2 1/2 tons on the first cutting were visited. Alfalfa sells from $15 to $20 a ton and requires but little attention in comparison with fruit and other crops.

JACK KNIFE SALES IN COUNTRY FALLING OFF

SCHOOL EQUIPMENT KEEPS IN BETTER CONDITION

Desks in Salem Schools Will Be Reconditioned During the Summer Months

The matter of caring for the seats and desks of the Salem school district will be acted upon at a future meeting of the Salem school board, according to the action taken last night. A report of the needed repairs to the equipment was made by Mr. Johnson, specialty man who has been in Salem for this purpose. Approximately 800 desks will have to be cared for, in order that the usefulness of the equipment may be retained.

Mr. Johnson brought out the fact that desks and seats were not cut and hacked by the students of today as they were in the past. The supposition was that the pent up energy of the pupils was released by the intensive training in athletics.

Another reason advanced by members of the board considered the decreased sale of jack knives, which has been reported by cutlery men. It was stated that knife sales among school children of the United States has decreased by several thousand.

It was also stated by one of the school board members that the heavy jack knives were too much for the small boys who would for home. The big knife would be too much of a handicap in making a home run.

Mr. Johnson reported that all the centers, formerly famed because students cut the desks to pieces by whittling or carving their initials and names in the hard wood.
