SELF-MASTERY:—Keep back thy servant also from presumptuous sins; let them not have dominion over me: then shall I be upright, and I shall be innocent from the great transgression. Let the words of my mouth, and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in Thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer. Psalm 19: 13, 14.

OUR FARMERS MORE RESPONSIVE The writer mentioned a few days ago that the Irish Free State has taken up the proposition of making that country self contained in sugar; has contracted for the construction of a large beet sugar factory, the builders of which have guaranteed the Irish farmers $13.12 a long ton for beets on the basis of 15.5 sugar content; higher as content may be higher.

The British government had already taken up the matter of producing the sugar needed in England, Scotland, Wales, and other parts of the home country; having offered bounties to manufacturers—high rates for three years, and tapering off up to seven additional years.

And providing guarantees to farmers for the first three years of $10.69 a long ton for their beets. But the farmers did not respond by taking contracts to grow beets, in sufficient number to guarantee a supply to the factories being erected and projected.

So the price was raised to the Irish price, $13.12 a long ton. Even this extra attractive extra offer did not bring in the ultra conservative farmers there—

And to meet this situation the Anglo-Scottish Beet Sugar corporation, which operates the factory at Colwick and is building others at Spalding and Kidderminster, has worked out a plan which practically relieves the farmer of all risk and insures him a liberal return for the use of his land and labor.

This proposal is to pay the grower 10 pounds (about $50) per acre for land devoted to beet cultivation. The farmer is required merely to plow, manure, and seed the fields. Seed is supplied him free, and the company undertakes all the hand labor for thinning, cultivating, and harvesting the beets. The grower has the advantage of a guaranteed return and is relieved of all worry regarding the provision of hand labor, "which is the most troublesome part of beet cultivation."

(The quoted words are those of an English authority interested in the program for producing their sugar for their own needs at home.)

The farmers of the Salem district are more responsive— They would be very glad to produce sugar beets at $13.12 a long ton—

Enough of them to keep a factory going; likely enough to keep several factories going—

And in fact they would be glad to produce sugar beets at around half that price, or around $6 a short ton, guarantee, with a contract to go fifty-fifty with the factory for the additional returns, depending in the final settlement upon the prices received for the sugar. That is what the farmers are doing in Colorado, Utah, Montana, California, Michigan, and a number of other states—

And they are growing more beets this year than ever before; and more to the acre, and of a higher sugar content. The more they grow to the acre, the higher the sugar content, and the higher the price of the sugar when sold, the more they get—

And this would be the same at Salem. Our farmers would from year to year increase their yields and the sugar content of their beets.

The "most troublesome part of beet cultivation" is indeed the hand labor. That is the reason why Salem is the best point in Oregon for building the first beet sugar factory. Our farmers are used to securing large numbers of laborers in their tree and bush fruit and strawberry and hop growing and harvesting operations, and in onion and set-and other vegetable growing.

And after the flax and linen industry development, the next most important thing here in the Salem district in new industries is the building up of the sugar industry.

UNSATISFACTORY STATUS Whether Oregon's superintendent of banks appears in court today where he has been cited to show cause why he should not be punished for contempt of court, will not satisfy the public that he or any other state official should be allowed to remove a state office from one place to another at will.

NEED FOR LENIENCY That the United States should be lenient to her debtor European neighbors is the opinion of students of international finances. This opinion is based on the ability or lack of ability to pay and the had effect payment under pressure would have upon markets for American products in the debtor nations.

Have you bought a poppy—its a privilege, a duty in remembrance of those who sacrificed and of those who suffer.

What a bower of floral beauty is the capital city now!

MY MARRIAGE PROBLEMS

CHAPTER 471 THE MIRRORING HOPE THAT FLITTED BEFORE MADGE'S EYES.

"Not here now!" I echoed faintly. "When will he be here?" George, the chauffeur, to whom in desperation I had just entrusted the scarab given me by Harry Underwood, with the request that he give it to the Big Tangerine, shuffled his feet uneasily.

"I can't just say, Miss," he said at last, and he spoke furtively out of the side of his mouth, so that no one outside the room could possibly hear him. I guessed that his fear of Grace Draper or her satellite, Linda, was as active as my own.

"The Big Tangerine, he comes and he goes, nobody knows when: He hasn't been here for several days now, so I guess he's about due again. And I'll see him as soon as he comes in. I can promise you that."

"I managed to get out a feeble 'thank you,' and I felt myself swaying with the effort to stand upright. I had counted more than I knew upon the mysterious and evidently powerful member of the gang called the Big Tangerine, with whom Harry Underwood had claimed close association.

"I found myself a prisoner, to know that the only link I had with rescue was the doubtful and easily-quelled sympathy of this chauffeur—these were blows indeed to hope."

"Pretend to Be Asleep." George looked at me uneasily. "Better lie down," he advised, "so she won't suspect anything."

I obeyed him, both because his advice was sound, and because my knees refused to support me any longer. I tottered to the couch near the fireplace and threw myself upon it, shivering in spite of the warmth of the room.

A brilliant Indian blanket lay across the couch, and after a few seconds I managed to wrap myself in it. George started toward me irresolutely.

"I guess nobody'd object if I fixed up the fire," he said, still in the subdued monotone he had used before. "But you mustn't talk to me. Pretend to be asleep."

"Thank you," I whispered, "I'm so cold." Then I obediently closed my eyes and kept them closed while George coaxed the fire to a blaze most grateful to my chilled body, and then stroled back to his station near the door to wait for Linda.

Across the Transom. She was not long in returning, and when, after unlocking the door, she came in, she bore a tray laden with a most appetizing lunch. A pot of steaming tea, poached eggs on toast, strawberry jam, crisp little rolls—my healthy body yearned for the shaken nerves and I remembered that I had eaten nothing since a light breakfast.

"You'll have to stand me with you, though," she said, standing in the doorway with arms akimbo. "Gracie's orders are never to leave you alone a second. Say, you must be a smart one, if Gracie's afraid you'll put one over on her."

I made her no answer, though "I thought she was going to faint away, she was shivering so," George said apologetically, "so I fixed up the fire a bit."

"Thats a'right," Linda responded pleasantly, and I looked at her with furtive sharpness. Somewhere on her excursion she had acquired not only good nature, but a perceptible thickness of speech. The deduction that she had a private cache of intoxicants somewhere was a childishly simple one. I tucked away the fact in my mental work basket, with the wild hope that I might somehow turn it to account, and spoke to her conciliatingly.

"May I bathe my face and hands before I eat?" I asked meekly. "Sure thing," she responded. "Just a second till I get this door locked. So long, George."

"So long," the chauffeur replied, and then the turning of the key sounded knell-like to my ears, and Linda, slipping the key into her bodice, crossed the room and swung open the door to an immaculate and luxurious little bathroom with gleaming tiles and silvered fittings.

"Salem industries are stable. Salem is not a fly-by-night town. It is being built on a real foundation."

THINGS THAT NEVER HAPPEN

the knowledge that I was to have no more privacy than a prisoner condemned to death would have distressed me immeasurably at any other time. But all my faculties were concentrated on the mirror above the hand-basin.

Opposite it was a door with a transom above it, the transom standing slightly ajar, and across the surface of the mirror had flitted like a breath the reflection of a figure I knew.

LIFE LINES

Fred Taylor

Whitsunday, "When the day of Pentecost was fully come." Among the holy days in the church calendar is Whitsunday. It comes this year on Sunday, May 31. It marks the fiftieth day after the greatest miracle of all time, the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead. It is associated with the Jewish festival of Pentecost and the Christian celebration of the descent of the Holy Spirit. It is one of the oldest observances in the Christian religion and is celebrated by many branches of the Christian church.

It is regarded as a day of great rejoicing and spiritual refreshing. It is the day of waiting in some upper room of meditation and prayer for the promise of the Father. It provides the opportunity for each follower of the Christian faith to receive a personal Pentecost. It makes the church a worshipping working and witnessing organization. It opens the way for all races to find the light and liberty of truth. It purposes to establish the Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of man. It ushers in the new day of the reign of peace and love and justice to all. It completes the trilogy of great Christian days, Christmas, Easter, and Pentecost, or Whitsunday.

Shop at Home

---first

YEARS ago people went into the market place "to shop". They went, not knowing what they would find, its price or its worth. Weary hours were spent in inspection, in bargaining and buying

Today manufacturers are bringing the market place to your home. Every time a newspaper comes, a host of people are ringing your door-bell. Merchants and manufacturers are waiting on the doorstep to spread their goods at your feet for you to look at—to inspect at leisure and in comfort.

Don't let the opportunity that advertisements offer you slip by. No matter what you want, clothing, groceries, a fountain pen or a farm, you will find the "better" ones in the advertising columns.

The advertisements tell you where you can get what you want. They are a guarantee of worth that protects your purchase.
