JUNIOR PLAYERS TRAIN FOR COMING CONTESTS

FIELD MICE AND OREGON JOURNALS TO PLAY SOON

Managers Worried and Are Taking No Chance With Members of Either Team

The local drug stores are having a long run on glow worm oil and rattle snake liniment these warm days. It all happened because of the Junior Twilight baseball tournament that will be finished next week. The contenders are the Field Mice and Oregon Journals.

Bob Bishop the manager is having his worries and making preparations so that no emergencies will arise. The field has been re-lined and surveyed and a new mound made.

The Field Mice after being put out of the running, came back on a protest game and soundly trounced Lemmon's Five Fats who were conceded champions. Trainer Miller has ordered every Field Mouse in bed by 9 o'clock and has called up parents to see that his ruling is obeyed. Bill East, trainer of the Journals ordered a strict diet of milk and plenty of vegetables.

HIGH SCHOOL COACH SITUATION UNCHANGED

BOTH SIDES ENJOYING PERIOD OF INACTIVITIES

Society Is Said to Be Backing Alumni Member for Huntington's Position

The situation of securing a coach of athletes at the Salem high school remains unsettled, with no definite action being taken by any side. From all indications, it appears that the Salem high school will wake up to the fact that they will not have a coach for the next year.

A report made to the school board at their last meeting by George Hug, city superintendent of schools, stated that he had met with the student council, where they had refused to take action on voting money from the student body funds to pay the $650 necessary to complete the sum for the salary.

It appears that a move is on foot to secure another coach, because Hollis Huntington refuses to return under any other arrangements. Politics enters in for a bit. A high school society with a membership casting a controlling vote in the student council seeks to secure a coaching berth for one of its alumni members, it is stated from other sources.

The Salem high school student council is objecting to voting funds for paying the coach on the grounds that they depleted their treasury when they voted a sum of money to pay for clearing the old high school grounds for use, following a misunderstanding with the officials of Sweetland field.

BRITISH WAR HERO IS SPEAKER HERE FRIDAY

MAJOR SHOFF IS CANADIAN MOUNTED POLICEMAN

Engagements in Africa Related; Trophies of Hunt Are Shown to Students

The Willamette university students enjoyed a very instructive lecture given in the Waller Hall chapel by Major Shoff, of the Canadian mounted police, at 4 o'clock Friday afternoon. The feature of the lecture was an account given by the Major of one of the British engagements in Africa with the natives.

Trophies in the shape of the skins of animals killed by the major were displayed including trophies taken from the Canadian northwest, from Africa, from Australia and from India. The collection also included a number of the native African weapons such as the native shields and spears.

The major then displayed a number of swords which he had collected from various parts of the world and amused the students by showing them a number of the more intricate tricks of sword play.

A number of uniforms from the various armies in which the major had seen service were then shown as was an iron vest worn by one of Napoleon's troopers at the famous sunken road.

Another interesting antique was an ancient elephant gun, one of the earliest made, which had to be loaded from the muzzle and had a bore much larger than any that are now in use.

Shells used in the late world war and others used in a Mexican revolt were also exhibited.

Near the end of his lecture Major Shoff told of one of the engagements in which he took part where 300 British troopers met and defeated over 2,400 black savages, of his own narrow escape from death and of the heroism of a pal.

In conclusion Major Shoff told of the hunting conditions in the Canadian northwest where he is now serving the English government and invited any of the students interested to make a trip this summer.

SPORTS DONE BROWN

"Cubs Lack Spirit of 1924." says a headline. But this may only be a bear story concerning Killefer's Kids.

With the Athletics looming as the only real rivals of the Washington Senators in the American League and the Phillies giving the Dodgers a fight for second place in the National circuit all jokes about the steepness of the Quaker City fall rather flat these days.

Those who say Connie's outfit in action in Florida expected the Long Leader to get his team "up there." They, as well as Connie, however, counted on the help of Lefty Groves, $100,000 Baltimore beauty.

When Groves failed to get going in his first two starts the fans began to offer Connie a bit of pity.

Then Sam Gray stepped into the breach with his perfectly controlled curve ball; Walter Cochran, young Pacific Coast catcher, started slamming the ball about; Eddie Rommel hit his stride; Slim Harris found himself and the team proceeded to climb without Mr. Groves. They're still going strong.

The Phils, in Florida, seemed little stronger than they appeared at the close of last season. Manager Art Fletcher, however, had instilled in them a fighting spirit which the team had lacked. He acquired George Barns, veteran outfielder, from the Reds. Later on he picked up Louis Fonseca from the Reds. And before the general public was aware of it he had his outfit ambling along in fine style.

The Reds went blooze. Uncle Robbie and his Brooklyn outfit were handicapped by poor pitching. The Pirates got off on the wrong foot. The Cubs were handicapped by an avalanche of injuries and hard luck. Fletcher said nothing but kept his team plugging. Now the Phils loom as a real contender team. They probably haven't the punch necessary to nose out the Dodgers, should that team finally get its usual brand of pitching. The Giants seem to have the lead to themselves, of course.

But right now the long down-trodden Phils, built of little and on one of the cheapest payrolls in the big leagues, are the talk of the circuit.

So vaudeville artists and wise crackers in general can pick on some other city for a while.

Now there's Boston—

But why bring that up. While George Sisler failed in his effort to excel his own record for hitting safely in consecutive games he need not feel downhearted. As things stand now he is the possessor of three records of which he can be mighty proud.

One of these, of course, is that of collecting one or more hits in 41 consecutive games.

The second is his mark of 420 for a single season, the American League record.

The third is his feat of ringing up 257 base hits in 1920, a major league record.

Sisler's 41-game batting streak began July 27, 1922 and ended Sept. 17. That rampage helped him compile the remarkable season average of .420.

The Brown leader's spurt this year was indeed remarkable although it ended with the thirty-fourth contest. Sisler started the run the first game in which he appeared. Which means that, until he was stopped in that thirty-fourth contest he had not gone hitless a day in the 1925 campaign.

Which isn't bad work for a man who feared, two years ago, that he was through as a batter, if not with baseball altogether.

plenty of clothes will be worn in every act and to eliminate any jokes that might not be perfectly approved. The board consists of Miss Eyre and Miss Fisher.
