Do you measure your clothesline by feet-or by days? Does it stretch from the corner of the house to the fenceor from one week to another, always keeping you tied to a disagreeable task? The true measure of a clothesline is the time it represents in your daily life. A washday a week means 52 days a year, or one-seventh of your time.

To many women who use our laundry service a clothesline means "something to tie up trunks with", or "a rope for the children's sled". They send us their weekly washing-rid themselves of the drudgery of washday slaveryfree themselves from the bonds of the clothesline. A telephone call will bring our representative to explain our various services. Call us today.
