

COAST GUNS ARE FIRED
SALEM MEN ACTIVE AT FORT BARRY; RETURN JULY 2

FORT BARRY, Cal., June 22.—(Special to The Statesman.)—The first of the service ammunition to be used this year by the Oregon coast artillery was fired here this afternoon. A total of 32 service shots were used by the Marshfield and Newport companies in the six-inch guns. This will complete the work with the smaller guns, although there is still considerable sub-caliber and service ammunition to be fired from the 12-inch rifles.

A large number of the Salem headquarters and medical detachment were on the target-tug during the practice under Lieutenant Bates of the headquarters detachment. Several of the men were reported seasick, although none of them suffered severely.

Master-sergeant Radcliffe and Sergeant-major Ellery, both of Salem, were stationed at the battery commander's station during the practice to assist in checking up the range of the target and in locating the shots. Sergeant Charles Unruh, also of Salem, assisted in timing the shots at the battery used, and Sergeant Lankie, Salem, assisted in replacing the telephone headsets knocked out of adjustment by the heavy recoil of the guns.

The telephones and observation instruments of the fort commander's station were manned by Sergeants Crawford, Jaskoski, Earl Unruh and Private McDonald, all of Salem.

The work here will be complete June 29 and the Salem men are scheduled to return July 2.

SEA PRODUCT IMPORTANT
ANNUAL YIELD COULD NET ONE BILLION DOLLARS

CORVALLIS, June 24.—(Special.)—“The annual product of the sea could amount to one billion dollars if properly cared for,” said Dr. Barton Warren Evermann, director of the museum at the California Academy of Science, San Francisco, in his speech on “Resources of the Pacific Ocean”, Thursday evening at the “Y” hut before the first assembly of the summer session of students of the Oregon Agricultural College.

“The expense of the building up of the sea resources is almost nil when compared to the irrigation and commercial fertilizer necessary to make land productive,” continued the speaker.

There are 40 different species of mammals in the Pacific Ocean, said Dr. Evermann. These form one of the most important natural resources. Of the different varieties, the Northern sea otter is the most valuable fur bearing animal in the world.

A two reel motion picture illustrating the habits of the seals was shown during the evening. Little incidents in the life of the seal was told at this time. Chief among these was perhaps that swimming is not a natural instinct but is learned when the young are three months old. Another thing in which the audience was interested was the fact that the male seals do not feed between May and October.
