

GREB GETS DECISION; WILLS KNOCKS WEINERT OUT IN THE SECOND ROUND

GREB-WALKER MIX IN TERRIFIC BOUT

Middleweight Champ Gets Decision; Battle Is Fierce and Thrilling

Greb Takes Aggressive; Walker Badly Battered at End of Fight; No Knockdowns Are Scored

POLO GROUNDS, New York, July 2.—(By Associated Press.)—In fifteen rounds of terrific fighting tonight Harry Greb of Pittsburgh, Penn., retained his world's middleweight championship against Mickey Walker of Elizabeth, N. J., welterweight king, before a colorful throng of 25,000 spectators in the main bout of a benefit show for the Italian hospital fund.

Lashing gamely back in the closing rounds, Walker saved himself from a knockout by a courageous stand which brought the crowd to its feet in a tribute which has seldom been given a beaten man in the ring history of the national league baseball park. But Greb had pined up a tremendous lead on points throughout the fight and the judges returned a speedy verdict for the title defender.

Twenty-four rounds of terrific fighting crammed into the card carried the immense audience to the heights of enthusiasm and then dropped it with a stunning thud as Harry Wills, negro heavyweight, battered Charley Weinert of Newark, N. J., to the canvas in two brief rounds of a 15 rounder, and Dave Shade of California stretched the sensational Jimmy Slattery of Buffalo to the canvas with an unexpected right in the third round of a carded six rounder.

The New Jersey heavyweight who fought his way back to the ranks of the challengers by a victory last winter over Luis Firpo proved no match for the Giant negro. Wills assumed the attack in the first as Weinert remained at a respectful distance and then quickly disposed of his opponent after one minute and 45 seconds of the second round with a staggering right. Weinert dropped in a neutral corner and tried in vain to get up with the aid of the ropes, but the finishing punch had completely paralyzed him.

The sensational Firpo-Dempsey fight fought in the same arena, was repeated in the final battle. Walker and Greb with knockdowns omitted. It was a meeting of modern cavemen armed with five ounce gloves. They battered each other back and forth across the ring and out of it. They wrestled in the clinches. They milled around the referee with such fury that four times he was thrown to the canvas, on the second trip so hard that his leg was injured and he had to carry on as third man, limping from gong to gong, and often holding himself up by the ropes.

Greb, at 159 pounds, was seven pounds heavier than the welterweight champion, and he used the margin to advantage throughout the battle. The Pittsburgh fighter, a master at all the tricks of the game, was too clever for his challenger. He was on top of Walker in every clinch with a right which never tired and which flew in all directions.

Walker was bewildered by the blinding volley which Greb played upon his head and body at close quarters. At his best in long distance fighting, Walker was unable to keep the bigger man away from him to shoot his solid smashes to the body and head with sufficient frequency to turn the tide of battle.

His mouth was cut, his right ear ripped and his cheek gashed near the nose as Greb wrestled him against the ropes to pile punch after punch on his head.

Grebs margin was not a long one, however, until the 14th. He had worn Walker down at this point by his unceasing attack at close quarters and as they parted from a clinch shortly after the opening of the round Greb rushed with a left and a right. Walker was staggered. He slipped to his knees under a punch as a wild fury from Pittsburgh leaped on him to finish the battle.

The fight round by round:

Round 1—Walker took the lead at the bell, boring in to Greb. Walker's right caught Greb at the bell. They fought furiously in the center of the ring, trading rights and lefts recklessly. A stiff right uppercut rocked Walker's head. Walker countered with two rights to the jaw and Greb went back to the ropes. Greb measured Walker with a right to the jaw. They both were fighting willingly, trading punches at will. The park was in an uproar. They sparred for an opening at the bell.

Round 2.—They traded punches to the body at close quarters. Greb rushed Walker to the ropes where he poured a furious head and body attack on his challenger. Walker's head rocked from a furious right. Another right drove him to the corner. Walker landed a beautiful left to Greb's mid-section and followed it with a right to the same place. The milling was furiously fast. Greb rocked Walker with a right and left to the head and the welterweight king stumbled to his knee but he was up immediately. They stood toe to toe slugging mercilessly. The bell ended the furious fighting.

Round 3.—They continued the maddening pace, both fighting openly. A terrific left to the ribs shook Walker. They clinched. Walker scored heavily to Greb's body. At close quarters Greb landed five times to Mickey's face and body. Both landed rights to the head. A stinging downward fight to Walker's face slowed the welterweight king. They were engaged in an exchange of blows at the bell.

Round 4.—Walker landed a left to the body. Greb countered with a stinging right to the face which staggered Walker. Another beautiful right to the face sent Walker back of his heels. A third one weakened Walker. They traded punches to the head. They wrestled in a neutral corner. Greb was in and out to the body before Walker could counter. The maddening pace was slackening and the boys were dancing around at the bell.

Round 5.—Greb landed his right to Walker's uncovered jaw but Walker countered with a harder blow to Greb's jaw. Blood began to show from Walker's mouth. They mixed it furiously. They traded body blows at close quarters. Walker landed his left to Greb's body but took a stiff right to the body and head in return. They were sparring for an opening at the bell.

Round 6.—Greb opened his

Places to go Over the Fourth

Where Fishing is Good
Neskowin—Via the West Side highway, turning off to the left at Slab creek, coming in sight of Neskowin, offers the angler plenty of good fishing when the salmon are running; it also offers good fishing for the smaller trout farther up the stream. Spinners and flies are both being used, the best flies being Royal Coachman, English Admiral, Governor and Professor. Salmon river is just a few miles from Neskowin and affords the fisherman good trolling for trout on the lower part of the river. Large size spinners and club is used. Several good catches have been made during the last two weeks. Farther up the stream fly fishing is to be had, where the same flies as used on Slab creek are best. Neskowin, altogether, offers an excellent vacation—fishing, surf bathing, crabbing and hiking, modern hotel and swimming with cozy cottages and an up-to-date sanitary camp grounds.

Devils Lake Resort Now Open—Devils Lake, the sportsman's paradise, situated between Cascade head and Siletz bay, 10 miles from Neskowin, on the Roosevelt highway. The lake itself is four miles in length and is one of the richest scenic spots on the coast. It is fed by trout from the heavily timbered mountain streams and they say it takes no experienced fisherman to coax the wily trout from its cool waters. Five fishing streams, the lake, ocean and two bays are within a radius of seven miles from Devils lake.

Tillamook Streams Are Good—The Trask and Wilson rivers, via the West Side highway to Tillamook, which is 93 miles from Salem. Fishing is fairly good on these two streams, spinner and chub being the popular bait. Such flies as Royal Coachman, English Admiral, Professor and Governor also bringing results. Some reports of good catches have been brought in during the past week from these two streams.

South Santiam, via Lebanon or Foster. This stream above Cascadia was opened to fishing July 1 and many are planning to spend the Fourth at Cascadia, where there is an excellent camp grounds. The roads are reported to be in fair condition between Foster and Cascadia. Spinners, salmon eggs and flies are the principal baits used, some good flies being blue and red upright, flying caddis and McInty. Some good catches are also being made farther down on the Santiam, just above Foster.

Butte Creek and Abiqua River, via Silverton, 25 miles from Salem—While these streams are not abounding in fish, the angler is always assured of a fair catch. These are good streams to fish and many camping spots are to be found to spend a day's outing. Salmon eggs and flies are the pop-
