Night of Brilliant Musical Entertainment Promised Chautauquans

Novelty by clever talent, fun, merriment, stimulating jazz combined with pretentious numbers that reach the classical, will be the offering of the famous Maupin's Singing and Novelty Band at Salem Chautauquans on the last night, July 16. Heading this combination of nine young men artists, each one a star performer, William L. Maupin, who became a distinct Chautauquans favorite when he directed Dunbar's White Hussars, will give a program of band music, solo and ensemble singing, and minstrelsy which covers a wide and satisfying range in variety and quality of offerings. The individual stars in this unique organization will introduce many instruments, including saxophones, xylophones, trombones, cornets, piano and others, featuring solos, duets, trios and ensemble numbers. The costuming is colorful, natty and extremely attractive. "The Parade of the Wooden Soldiers," which made a sensation on the Chicago Century Roof Theater, taken from the Russian production Ballet's "Chauve Souris," is one of the sensational novelties introduced by the Maupin Band. This is one of the biggest hits on the American stage, and the Maupin organization is said by many others to outshine the original production in the act.

Season tickets for Salem Chautauquans are on sale at Patton's, Hartman's Jewelry Store, Will's Music House, Commercial Book Store, Miller Store, Bishop's Clothing House, Buster Brown Shoe Store, Shafer's Harness Store, Opera House Pharmacy.

Edison Marshall, Francis Hackett, L. Adams Beck, and Ethel M. Dell Take Readers to Northland, Orient, New York City and Great Britain

BY AUDREY BUNCH
The Sleeper of the Moonlit Ranges, by Edison Marshall. Published by the Cosmopolitan Book Corporation. Price $2 net.
Oregon fiction readers will be particularly interested in Edison Marshall's latest success, "The Sleeper of the Moonlit Ranges," which is as picturesque in content and as full of sly, sly characterization as the caption that identifies the volume. A triangle of personalities encounter obstacles that they themselves hardly understand, and at least have no control over, and in the end all is as smooth as Santa Barbara after the earthquake, without the inconvenience of the debris or the tragedy of the wreckage. "The Sleeper of the Moonlit Ranges" is written without wreckage and the leads in the story are all survivors which is really remarkable considering the extremes to which Marshall successfully, one after the other submits them, leaving the reader in a perpetual white-hot of absorption. But Marshall is artist enough not to get his cart before his horse and every page is well-motivated with plenty of deliberate descriptions.

The Northland, that great territory marked with "a quality of beauty, a strange, forlorn beauty that men find difficult to describe," is given as background for this engrossing tale of circumstance.

That Nice Young Couple, by Francis Hackett. Published by Boni and Liveright, New York. $2.00.
Francis Hackett's first novel, "That Nice Young Couple," now running through its second edition is a glibly written story of youth which youth itself is likely to resent. Whether there is truth in it or not isn't the thing; if there is truth, youth will be sure to feel that the author should at least have had the grace to have kept it covered. And if there isn't truth, but well, the reader knows there is. He can take it that these faltering two aren't representative. If that helps. But he'll ponder it for a good long time. And "That Nice Young

BAPTISTS RAP OIL KING
SEATTLE, July 4.—(Associated Press.)—With adjournment of the 19th annual meeting delayed a few hours to listen to papers that had been crowded out by a week of controversy, the northern Baptist convention reached a compromise here today. Inspiration at exercises fell tomorrow. After the compromise was attained in a struggle between modernists wishing to drive ahead in practical works and fundamentalists declaring that John D. Rockefeller, his family and his associates were being allowed to dominate the church, the conservatives gave notice by which the by-laws may be modified at next year's meeting in Washington, D. C.

PEOPLE AND EVENTS SILVERTON

SILVERTON, Or., July 4.—(Special to The Statesman.)—A county rock crusher has been built on the banks of Silver Creek a few miles below Silverton on the Gid Bowen property. The crusher, which is modern in all respects, is electrically operated, power being taken from the electric line running from the Scanty to the Brush Creek road. Six trucks are used to haul the finished rock from the crusher which has a capacity of over 100 yards a day. Roads in the vicinity of Silverton are receiving needed improvement, a number of them having been recently designated as market roads.

About 400 people gathered at the Trinity church Thursday evening to join with Rev. and Mrs. George Henriksen in celebrating the eve of their silver wedding anniversary. The celebration was planned as a surprise by the Trinity congregation and was held on July 2 instead of July 3 in order that George Henriksen, Jr., who is traveling with the Luther College band as manager of the tour might be present. Owing to the cancellation of the minister.

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served, the guests of honor, visiting pastors and a few friends being seated at a beautifully decorated table. The color scheme of the decorations was pink and white and a large silver and white wedding cake stood before the bride and groom. In the absence of her husband, Rev. Christensen, Mrs. M. A. Christensen of Portland acted as loving for brief speeches: Rev. toastmaster, calling upon the following: H. Rogen of Monitor, "Daddy" Steelhammer, Rev. O. K. Anderson of Woodburn, Rev. L. Sherwin, A. O. Nelson, J. C. Goplerud, A. Corhouse, George Henriksen Jr., Mrs. George Henriksen, Rev. S. Lindseth and Rev. George Henriksen.

Upon the conclusion of the speeches the band gave a few numbers and the president, Casper B. Nervig, expressed his appreciation and thanks for entertainment given band members during their two-day stay in Silverton. The concluding number was the "Battle of Little Big Horn" played by the band.

Very little activity was noticeable in Silverton, Saturday as no celebrations of any kind were planned. The closing of the stores and mills enabled many people to go on camping and picnic trips. Others went to neighboring towns where celebrations were held. Stayton, Molalla, Spoons Landing, Silver Creek Falls and Pacific City were the destinations of many from Silverton. The city park and swimming pool at Silverton proved popular with many who did not care to leave the city.

The Lutheran Brotherhood of Silverton met at the St. Johns church June 30. The meeting was opened with invocation by Rev. W. N. Sjovangen. An interesting paper on the subject of the "Ideal Home" was read by H. N. Klev. At the business meeting the president, A. O. Nelson, on behalf of the executive committee introduced the proposition of amalgamating all Lutherans of Silverton and community into one congregation. Mr. Nelson stated that, because of lack of organization and of ministers, many of Lutheran faith were deprived of the privileges of Lutheran services, there being about one hundred thousand in Oregon alone who are without the services of Lutheran pastors. The question of uniting the several Lutheran churches of Silverton was thoroughly discussed. A resolution was adopted which instructed the president and secretary to communicate a suggestion to the Trinity and St. Johns churches, being the two largest Lutheran churches in Silverton, that they each elect a committee of five to meet and discuss plans for union.

The American Lutheran church and hospital proposition will be held in abeyance while the congregations are considering the amalgamation matter.

The Benson pheasant farm has been the scene of much activity this spring. During the past few weeks a number of the old birds have been sold to make room for new stock. About three hundred and fifty of the old birds were shipped to one address at Bellingham, Wash. Lack of broody hens made it necessary to sell many of the eggs which might otherwise have been set. Eleven hundred eggs were sent to Seattle during the laying season. It is expected that about four thousand birds will be raised this year. Because of the appearance of game among the birds it is necessary to remove the pens to new ground. Practically all of the pens now on hand are being torn down and the material used in the construction of pens on the creek bottom land some distance from the present location. Many of the pens had been built within the last few years while others had been in use since the farm was first begun. The moving of the pens means the moving of the water system

Beck, Published by Dodd, Mead & Company, New York. To read a Dell book is among one's Price $2 net.

An adventurous romance of considerable glamor is successfully interwoven into an intense background of Eastern mysticism. The book is not in the least sensational, and is presented in a manner that leaves one harboring vivid impressions of the beauties of Eastern culture and Eastern thought. The plot deals with an attempt of the Russian Bolsheviks to overthrow English rule in India. One feels throughout that an immense bibliography stands back of "The Way of Stars," and yet in not one of the pages is there anything extraneous or left unabsorbed by the attractively presented story. The settings provide the book with a real atmosphere in which the action of the story proceeds.

CAMMARATA ACCORDIONIST AT THE BLIGH

An act that is different is the way the Iverson sisters and their rube syncopators describe themselves. This act will top the new bill at the Bligh theater today. It is a small town revue and said to be novel throughout. The sisters appear in many snappy dances and their singing is said to be a treat with the music by the rube band in a class by itself. Eight people make up this offering, considered one of the season's best. In the act presented by Sheldon and Ducharme, called "The Lollipop Kids," there is said to be plenty of good entertainment. At that time he will take part in a match with Paul Amort of Portland, one time holder of the welterweight championship of the Pacific coast, and now instructor at the Benson Polytechnic. Not only is much interest shown in Silverton over the approaching match, but fans of a number of neighboring towns have signified their intention of being present. The match, held at the Hippodrome, will be refereed by Ted Thye, Multnomah Athletic club instructor.
