SWEATING CROWD CHEER AS BRYAN ENTERS COURT

casting off all judicial stiffness in his desire to expedite the lawsuit. Those who attended the trial found opportunity to relax upon the shaded grass of the fenced-in lawn. Here a holiday air prevailed; vending stands and hawkers, inviting them to eat and drink.

Strolling musicians drew the visitors into groups under the court yard trees, vying with each other in drawing melodies from plectrum organ, banjo or harp.

Other groups assembled where champions of opposing issues debated their points vehemently. On the ground, picnic parties spread their mid-day meals, while babies crooned or wailed or wept. Within the courtroom the heat was tense. Darrow and Bryan set a precedent by drawing off their coats. Collars were loosened and fans were waved vigorously.

Photographers were everywhere. They ground out moving pictures of the principals and they entered the grounds and snapped them intermittently throughout the day in varying attitudes.

An impressive silence ruled while the court in charging the grand jury read the first chapter of Genesis. Reporters called it significant.

Many incidents lightened the gravity of the trial. Infectious laughter ensued when some one passed around among attorneys a caricature of Bryan which represented him as a member of a jungle race. Mr. Bryan shook with appreciative convulsions and the judge came down from his platform to look at the exhibit. He chided the fundamentalist champion who exclaimed: "It's a work of art."

CHAUTAQUA AUDIENCE HEARS OF COMMUNISTS

and about the party made the 2500 miles across Siberia to the stronghold of the Soviet government to explain their presence in Siberia at such a time, and then a return trip was made, only to find that the vessel Polar Bear had been confiscated with all of her provisions. Captain Gudmundson was then forced to sell a $100,000 fur cargo and with the proceeds repair another abandoned vessel in which to return to America.

In speaking of the impression the Bolshevik party and the Soviet government made on him, Captain Gudmundson said:

"There ought to be an open season on every communist, all the year around."

"They speak of, but come far from really having, political freedom, freedom of speech, freedom of the press and freedom of religion," he said. "In order to vote you have to be a communist. You are afraid to open your mouth about anything except to eat for fear of swallowing a bayonet. Freedom of the press is a joke. Every bit of news contained in the papers is censored by officers of the Soviet government. Religion means nothing to the communist. He laughs at it and at God. There are no marriage ties; a man may marry and divorce 50 times in a day if he wishes. There is no home life. There can not be where it is possible for a government to take a man on a moment's notice and thrust him to some frontier and to almost certain death."

In closing Captain Gudmundson said:

"In every instance the experiment of the communistic power has been a terrible failure. From them we can learn this lesson, we need and we must have both capital and labor. What America, what the United States needs, what every country in the world needs is not a casting aside of all existing conditions, but a closer, firmer, saner, knowledge of human nature and a truer faith in God, in man and in our country."

Furnishing not only an attractive prelude to the lecture last night, but giving a full afternoon program in addition, the League's Orchestral Entertainers made ready inroads toward the culminating success of the entire Chautauqua season.

The chief trace of this company of four lies in an amazing versatility, each artist interchanging talent at a succession of instruments. Geographically, the four

A saxophone duet opened the afternoon program, the artists, in striking that happy medium between the classic and the popular, gave "Dance of the Hours." A group of popular numbers on the xylophone followed next in order, after which the pianist, proving her talents were far from confined to the instrumental, sang two soprano solos, the first "The Stars That Light My Garden." Mr. Leake reproduced an "Early Morning on the Farm," a copyrighted performance of his own, in which he imitates familiar barn yard sounds with startling fidelity. Kreisler's "Serenade" as a violin solo was beautifully rendered, after which Mr. Leake demonstrated his whistling ability with suitable instrumental accompaniment at the hands of the other three artists. After numbers with the drums and the xylophone, and a marimbophone number by the group, the program closed with "The Southern Rhapsody," a melody of southern airs.

RECORD FINES ASSESSED AGAINST FURNITURE MEN VIOLATORS OF ANTI-TRUST LAW ARE FINED $188,000 Indictments Returned Against 83 Dealers; Fine Total Said Largest CHICAGO, July 10.—(By The Associated Press).—Fines ranging from $1,000 to $5,000 each and aggregating $188,000 were imposed today upon 83 furniture manufacturers who pleaded guilty in federal court to indictments charging violations of the Sherman anti-trust act. The firms are members of the national alliance of furniture manufacturers. The total number of fines is the largest ever collected in one case, federal officials said. The original indictments named 233 furniture manufacturers. Fifty of a group of chair manufacturers pleaded guilty some time ago and were fined $188,000. They were followed by refrigerator manufacturers, 160 of whom pleaded guilty and were fined $45,000. The group pleading today is part of 123 firms and members manufacturing bedroom, dining room and living room furniture. Fines collected thus far aggregate upward of $420,000. Two of today's guilty pleas were tentative and may be reduced to $4,000 if changed. The government has indicated new indictments, naming individuals, may be sought if not guilty pleas are entered by firms. Convictions would then carry a prison sentence. R. K. Welsh of Rockford, attorney for the defendants, said that they had violated the law "wholly without consciousness of any guilt," and had decided to pay fines rather than become imprisoned in a long and costly trial.
