MAKING $4 TO $1 WITH GOAT MILK CHEESE AGAINST COW MILK CHEESE

Four to One Is the Slogan of C. C. McCorkle & Son, on the Tillamook Highway—They Are Making the Emmental Cream Swiss Cheese—They Have a Herd of About 100 Milk Goats

Fifty-seven miles west of Salem on the Tillamook highway just east of the Summit of the Coast range will be found the goat and bee ranch of C. C. McCorkle and Son. They have about 100 milk goats at the present time including the kids. Thirty-seven of this number are milking, and from this milk they are manufacturing cheese.

The cheese was first made and named in Switzerland. The McCorkle goats are Saanen and Nubians. About a third of them are registered. There is a Saanen buck by Alta Switzerland, an imported animal that sold for $2000. He was out of a seven and a half quart milker.

A cave of about 10x14 feet is used to store the finished product. This cave is well screened and has shelves around the sides with a cutting table in the center.

Good Cheese Climate Mr. McCorkle says the climate favors the making of good cheese. The McCorkles have 120 acres of land; but their goats have "all out of doors" in which to range. That is, they have all the vacant land in that region.

How Can This Be? Mr. McCorkle explains that he gets one pound of cheese from six pounds of goat's milk, while it takes eleven pounds of cow's milk to make a pound of cheese. Also, the milk goat rustles her own living, where there is ample outdoor range, as in the hills of the Coast range. About all the artificial feed she requires is a handful of oats or mill feed to induce her to eagerly jump to her stanchion in order to be milked.

Numerous Advantages We find that production of mohair has several advantages over wool growing. In the first place, mohair nearly always commands a higher price than wool (see present market quotations for example). More head may be kept to the acre than is the case with sheep, a greater variety of herbage is consumed, and the quantity of the clip compares more favorably than is commonly accepted.

There is a demand at 60 cents a pound for all the cheese the McCorkles can turn out. They make the Emmental cream swiss cheese. It is of the nature of cheddar cheese, and of that form.

As a pioneer in the milk goat cheese industry in this state, Mr. McCorkle is likely to leave his impress upon his state in a way that will make his name honored in the generations to come.

ANGORAS MORE THAN DOUBLE THEIR ORIGINAL INVESTMENT EACH YEAR

They Are the Most Profitable of All Livestock, Says Mr. Hogg—The Production of Mohair Has Several Advantages Over Wool Growing—Demand for Mohair Exceeds Supply

(The following was written for the goat Slogan number of The Statesman of a year ago. Mr. Hogg intended to write again this year, but misunderstood the date till too late. However, the facts of a year ago stand very well for this year, and R. W. Hogg & Sons have shown their continued faith by participating in bringing new blood here from South Africa, as the accompanying cut will show.) Editor Statesman: If The Statesman were to devote an issue monthly to the interests of the Angora goats, we believe it would be space and effort well spent; for there is certainly no industry in Oregon which there is less possibilities of overproduction, and which can do more to make the country attractive to homeseekers. At the present time the demand for mohair exceeds the supply and would rapidly become much greater if it were produced in sufficient quantities to justify installation in the knitting mills of the special machinery required for its manufacture. Mohair is an exceedingly durable fibre for which the uses are rapidly increasing. Lack of space prevents enumeration of the many articles in common use that are made from it.

icious out or rambo was cut from a fat goat. "Chevon," as goat flesh is now known, is really more palatable than mutton, as any goat raiser will testify. Its bad reputation was due solely to the marketing of the flesh of the males by unscrupulous persons. When the consuming public becomes educated to the real value of chevon, a continuous market for surplus does, kids, and wethers will be assured. As a by-product of the slaughter yard, the hide of the Angora is of considerable importance, being used in the manufacture of rugs, furs, and various other articles.

During the several years we have raised Angora goats we have found them the most profitable of all livestock, more than doubling our original investment every year. The chief reason for this is that the mohair goat offers more sources of income than any other farm animal. In addition to the mohair clipped annually, and the yearly increase of young, the benefit to our farm in added fertility and increased pasture through destruction of underbrush and weeds amounts to many dollars each year. We also have another source of income from premiums won on our breeding stock at the leading fairs.

The Angora does not deserve much of the bad reputation ordinarily attributed to goats. Although they consume a great variety of vegetation, they are contrary to popular opinion very dainty in habit. We have found them very easy to keep in fences as long as there was any feed to be had, although they are supposed to be breachy by habit. Goats are very hardy and will survive under more severe conditions than sheep, but, like all farm animals, they respond to proper care, and should have a shelter in the winter, and regular attention at all times.

"DUEL" DETAILS GIVEN

BLOODLESS BATTLE TUESDAY NIGHT INTERESTING

Details of the shooting scrape that occurred Tuesday night, when Harry Rich, former proprietor of the Terminal cigar store, and Lloyd Groves met in a bloodless encounter, came to light in the sheriff's office yesterday. The shooting match took place east of the penitentiary.

According to the information available, Rich came to Salem after he had heard that another man was paying attentions to his divorced wife, who was then working on a ranch east of Salem. Rich went to the farm, found the man, and, according to reports, proposed a fist fight to settle the matter. His offer was taken up. Rich's opponent took a gun out of his pocket and threw it on the ground, and both squared away for a primitive battle. Rich then, according to deputy sheriffs, pulled a coup. Reaching into his pocket he is said to have produced a gun and ordered Groves to "reach for the ceiling." Instead of doing this, Groves made a break for his revolver, Rich meanwhile firing three shots which took no effect. Groves reached his gun and opened fire on Rich, the latter by this time having sprinted some distance from the scene and jumped a fence. Five shots were said to have been fired by Groves without any result.

No arrests have been made in the case.

Shaw Declines Invitation in Characteristic Letter

LONDON—Another of George Bernard Shaw's letters has gotten into print, this time a note declining an invitation from T. P. O'Connor to attend a dinner for Ramsay MacDonald. It follows: "My Dear T. P.—Absence from town and a strong sense of humor will prevent me from accepting your invitation to dine in acknowledgment of the political eminence of Ramsay MacDonald. Considering that the man has been prime minister of England, I should have thought his eminence had been noticed.

"If the dinner is a success, I suggest that it be followed by another to acknowledge the piety of the Pope, yet another to emphasize the mathematical talent of Einstein, and a final one to call attention to the existence of milestones on the Dover-road.

"If you could throw in a lunch to remind people that I am rather good at writing plays, all the better. "These meals would have come in more handy, 50 years ago. Still they are well meant, and I hope you will all enjoy yourselves very much.

Lifting the veil

IN DISTANT lands—in jungles and fertile valleys, on mountains and by the sea—millions of people are patiently laboring in the collection of raw products.

Ships and trains bring these products to refineries and manufactories—to be fashioned into comforts, luxuries, conveniences—for you.

Advertisements tell you when these products are ready for your inspection. Advertisements tell you where to see them—how they are made—and what they cost. Advertisements lift the veil of production and tell you the things you need to know to buy safely and wisely.

Let advertisements guide you in all your purchases. Read them regularly. They are as interesting as any other news in the paper—with this in their favor. They concern you, personally.
