LESSONS

I saw two pairs of eyes today,
Two pairs of women's eyes;
And two were old, and two were young;
And both were sadly wise.

The old had kept the faith which comes
When time has dried the tears.
The young eyes neither hoped nor cared,
They only mocked the years.

AN INTERESTING LETTER
from Dr. Frederick Hill Thompson was received a few days ago by F. G. Myers written in the Garden of the Tuilleries out of Paris.

Excerpts from the letter are as follows:

"Imagine my surprise today to receive the box of candy from the Spa. The box came just as I was going to dinner this evening so those at our table at a real treat. There were people from Tennessee, Kentucky, Michigan, and Canada at the table—"

"I have been having a splendid trip, met many celebrated surgeons, and have seen some excellent surgical work. At each place visited, our party is divided into groups and each group goes to a different clinic. In that way we avoid congestion and there fore get better opportunities to learn. Dr. Charles Mayo of the Mayo Clinic has been with us throughout the clinical tour over here and that no doubt has done much toward the splendid receptions accorded us, an excellent work put on at the hospital for our benefit.

"Am leaving here shortly to be in Vienna for a time before going to Germany.

"Saw Mrs. William H. Burghard here. She is looking fine, though doing strenuous work in the musical line. She is quite taken with the opportunities offered here."

Dr. Thompson closes his letter with a further expression of appreciation for the gift from Salem, and remarks that he feels there are a number in Paris who know where Salem, Oregon is located.

Mr. and Mrs. Carey F. Martin, Frances Martin, Carey, Junior, and Ray Merhouse, are spending the day at Willhoit springs with a party of Portland friends.

Mrs. A. M. Dalrymple arrived home Friday evening from a two weeks' trip to Vancouver and Victoria, B. C. Mrs. Dalrymple made the interesting boat trip from Vancouver to Seattle. Four hundred tourists were on board for a journey that proved unusually pleasurable. Mrs. Dalrymple also visited in Seattle and stopped in Portland for the Elks' convention festivities.

One of Salem's most welcome house guests is Miss Ruth Fleming of San Francisco, who is visiting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fleming. Miss Fleming, who is the librarian at the State Teachers' college of California, arrived in Salem last Saturday night on her way home from the meeting of the library association, earlier in the month in Seattle. Miss Fleming is a former member of the English department of the Salem high school faculty. Her many friends will be glad to know she plans to be in Salem for a number of weeks.

Mrs. and Mrs. W. F. Park of Laverne, South Dakota are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Foley of 845 D. Street. They will be here for some time. Today they

Lemon Removes Lines, Wrinkles

Squeeze the juice of two lemons in a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White which any druggist will supply for a few cents, shake well and you have the very mildest anti-wrinkle lotion to tighten relaxed skin, erase fine lines and eradicate crows-feet. Massage this sweetly fragrant lemon lotion into the skin at night. By morning most of the toll-taken wrinkles, tired lines and crows-feet are smoothed out, giving a more youthful contour to cheeks, chin, throat. It leaves the skin velvety soft, clear and fresh. Beauty experts use this astringent lotion for enlarged pores, also to bleach and whiten sallow, tanned skin. Mix this harmless lotion yourself since it acts best immediately after prepared.—Adv.

Mrs. Raymond Walsh and children, Raymond and Priscilla, are at Neukwin for a week. Accompanying them over were Mrs. Kitty Graver and Miss Priscilla Fry.

Dr. and Mrs. Phil Newmyer entertained at one of the largest and most delightful social affairs of the summer weeks on Monday of last week when they celebrated their third wedding anniversary at their home. Pink sweet peas were used in a decorative way about the room. The prizes of the evening went to Mrs. Lester Barr and to Paul V. Johnson, who won firsts, and to Mrs. L. S. Geer and Henry V. Compton, who won seconds.

In the guest-group for the evening were: Mr. and Mrs. Eliss Darby, Dr. and Mrs. W. H. Darby, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Kirk, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Webb, Mr. and Mrs. Max Page, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Barr, Mr. and Mrs. William McGilchrist, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Busick, Mr. and Mrs. T. ## Clayton Hamilton Heralds the Coming of Sheridan's Stage Play, "The Rivals"

Distinguished Author, Lecturer and Dramatic Critic of New York City Appeared Yesterday Under Auspices of AAUW

Clayton Hamilton was in Salem yesterday as herald for one of the greatest stage plays of three generations which will be presented by an all-star cast, appearing in person, next Saturday night, at the Grand Theatre.

Mr. Hamilton, one of the most eminent dramatic critics of his generation, was introduced appropriately by Professor J. C. Nelson, at 11 o'clock yesterday at the Oregon Theatre. Mr. Hamilton, as forerunner of the presentation of "The Rivals" under the auspices of the American Association of University Women, devoted the major part of the hour which passed briefly as he spoke, to a series of enlightening details directly concerning Richard Brinsley Sheridan, the eighteenth century playwright. Many were interested to learn that "The Rivals" which has endured for one hundred and fifty years is the first play of a youth of only twenty-three. But, as Mr. Hamilton explained, he had his ancestors ably working for him for generations before. An interesting enumeration of three memorable plays of three centuries—"She Stoops to Conquer," by Oliver Goldsmith, and "The School" and "The School of Scandal," both by Sheridan, give the latter playwright the distinction of being the author of two thirds of all the drama that remains permanent out of that long period of years.

It is a play by this man—the brilliant Sheridan—that is coming to Salem on Saturday with Mrs. Fluke and Chauncey Olcott heading the outstanding cast of twenty-nine years—since Mrs. John Drew and Julia Marlowe started in 1896.

Mr. Hamilton's sentences brim over with drollery and human interest information as he relates of "The Rivals" from its first production in January 17, 1775, to its sesquicentennial revival now at hand.

For a few days of Mrs. Breyman Boise at the Boise cottage. Miss Prudence Patterson is spending the summer in The Dalles.

A four-day family reunion was held earlier in the month at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Giese at their home in North Salem. The reunion was planned particularly for the week end in which Mrs. P. J. Lester, of Vellicsa, Iowa, was in Salem as the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Giese, during an extended trip in the west. All the children of Mrs. Lester, with the exception of R. W. Lester of Canada, who was detained on account of illness were present for the reunion which was attended by members of the family from as far north as Saskatchewan, Canada, to as far south as Padroni, Colorado. The Friday before the Fourth was spent in a family gathering at the Giese home, while on the succeeding days, the group enjoyed a picnic at Silver Creek Falls and a trip up the Columbia highway.

In the family group were: Mrs. P. J. Lester of Vellicsa, Iowa; Dr. H. F. Lester and son, Paul, S. H. Lester of Oakland, Calif.; of Streator, Ill.; Mr. and Mrs. Mrs. E. J. Smith of Dalesboro, Saskatchewan, Canada; Miss Kate Lester of Padroni, Colo.; Mrs. C. E. Overland of Oakdale, Calif.; Mrs. James O'Neill of San Francisco; Mrs. F. R. Glasner and daughter, Virginia, of Cedar Falls, Ia.; Miss Zella Lester, of Welsler, Ida.; Mr. and Mrs. C. J. O'Neill (Theresa Smith) of Marshfield, Oregon, and the following from Salem: Lester Smith, Rev. and Mrs. Raymond McIvanna, and children, Raymond and Geraldine, Joe Worth, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Giese, and children, Parker and Katherine.

Mrs. Charles Bier and son, Charles, are guests for the week end of Mrs. Donald McArthur of Independence at her cottage at Newport.

CHAPTER F62

THE FINE WAY KATHERINE BICKETT PROMISED TO HELP MADGE.

"Katherine!" I exclaimed with joy in my voice. "At your pleasure, my dear," Katherine Bickett returned, with a warm kiss of greeting. "But at that, it is I who should be exclaiming 'Madge!' No one told me you were coming. I feel distinctly defrauded."

"No one knew," I returned. "I didn't know myself until Dicky announced he had to go out of the city for a little trip. I couldn't see staying in that apartment by myself for any longer time than it took me to dress and pack my bag."

"How you do love city life!" Katherine glibbed, and then Katie struck into the conversation with a pleading, deprecatory note in her voice. "Pleas excuse, Misses Graham, but would you shoot as soon talk someone else? I 'fraid I get flour on you."

"Of course, Katie," I returned, and with Junior still clinging to my hand, Katherine and I returned to the living room. "Katie is planning some culnary surprise for us," I said as we drew our chairs close to the leaping blaze in the fireplace, and Junior cuddled into my arms for the "lots of lovings" he had demanded when I came.

"I thought so," Katherine replied, smiling. "She is so very transparent. But where is Mother Graham? Not ill, I hope?"

"Not in body," I answered, with a troubled smile. "But I believe she means to engage you to care for her as soon as she sees you. She wishes all communication with the rest of the family to come through you until she departs either for Pennsylvania or Michigan."

Madge Confides in Katherine.

"Whew!" Katherine emitted an astonished whistle. "Again?" "Very much again," I returned grimly.

I felt no breach of confidence in telling Katherine of Mother Graham's most recent tantrum. I had first seen this dear friend and learned to love her when she nursed my irascible mother-in-law through a severe illness in the first week of my marriage. Even if Katherine had not since become a kinswoman of mine through her marriage to my brother-cousin, Jack Bickett, she was too familiar a friend, too thoroughly acquainted with Mother Graham's vagaries for me to attempt to keep her in ignorance of the latest temperamental spasm of that august body.

So, in a few rapid words, I depicted the scene in which my mother-in-law had played the leading role. Katherine listened attentively, but the smile which quirked her lips soon faded, and when I had finished, her pretty mouth was a thin tight line, and her eyes were flashing indignation.

"And as usual, you were the ultimate goat," she commented. "Really, Madge, you are altogether too forbearing. If she were my mother-in-law—"

"You mean—?" "You!" I scoffed. "You'd be far more patient than I. Remember, I know you, Katherine Bickett, as well as if I'd moulded your flesh on your bones, so don't try to make yourself out a belligerent lady, for you can't do it."

"Little you know me!" she retorted. "But we'll get nowhere disputing the point, so suppose we talk about something else until Mother Graham discovers I'm in the house? What's the news along the Rialto?"

I gave a distinct start. I had forgotten the thing which I had meant to tell Katherine the moment I saw her. It was a message from little Mrs. Durkee, whispered to me the last thing before I left her home.

"I have troubling news from the Durkees," I replied, and hurried on to tell her of Mrs. Dur-
