Interested in Ape Trial—
Mrs. Susan McMunn of Quincy is especially interested in the famous evolution trial just ended at Dayton, Tenn., owing to the fact that Judge J. G. McKenzie, who is prosecuting the case, is her cousin, being the son of her father's sister. The original stock on her father's side came from Virginia, and the Abraham Lincoln branch, on her mother's side, from North Carolina, as did also the grandfather, Elijah Duncan, who fought in the Revolution. Mrs. McMunn, however, does with her illustrious kinsman, who denies evolution, believing that not only were men once monkeys, but that many of them continue to be.

Returns From Chicago—
Herman Hahn, who owns a fruit farm near Quincy, has returned from a nine months' visit to Chicago where he took a course in electrical engineering and attended a religious conference at Anderson, Ind. In Chicago he also visited his brother, Herbert, who is completing his studies at the Moody Bible school and taking a high school course, as well in preparation for work as a gospel missionary. Mr. Hahn expresses himself as being well pleased to be at home again, away from the extremes of climate, heat, winds and floods he encountered, and to see the forest growth he can now fully appreciate after noting the treeless plains of the middle west. While in Chicago he observed that the first cherries on the market sold at 50 cents a pound.

Wreck Brings Injuries—
Slight injuries were sustained by the occupants of two cars which collided Tuesday morning at the intersection of Chemawa road with the Pacific highway. The cars were driven by William A. Stone, a druggist of Pasadena, Cal., and by Manning F. Spiker of Portland. They were practically demolished in the collision. In the Stone car were his wife and daughter, both of whom received minor bruises and cuts. Spiker blames the accident to the fact that Stone was driving on the wrong side of the road. The cars were said to be traveling at a speed of 30 miles an hour when they collided.
