EARTH FAULTS ARE FOUND IN ROCKIES

Government Charts Splits Caused by Past Movements of Surface

DENVER, Colo., Aug. 6.—(By the Associated Press.) — Numerous dead faults, created ages ago by earth movements, probably when the Rocky mountains were being upraised, and which might cause earthquakes at some future time, have been located and charted by government geologists and others between Denver and Longmont and Boulder, Colo., and in the vicinity of Golden, Colo.

United States geological survey publications showing the geology of the Denver basin delineate the dead faults. Many geologists believe such faults in California to have been the cause of the recent disastrous Santa Barbara quake.

C. T. Lupton, a consulting geologist of Denver, says there is a well-defined zone of dead faults at least a quarter of a mile wide and 10 to 15 miles long, between Denver and Longmont.

This zone, containing a series of faults, crosses North Boulder creek about one mile east of the old postoffice of White Rock, in Boulder county, or four miles east of the town of Erie. It runs southeasterly to a point about midway between Louisville and Marshall.

Outcroppings of cretacious rock, and formations revealed by some of the northern Colorado cial mines have enabled geologists and students of the subject to locate and chart these faults, declares Mr. Lupton. There has been discovered no evidence of movement in these faults for centuries, it is stated.

Two or three dead faults have been located north of North Table mountain, near Golden, also, but evidently these have been inactive for ages, too. Formations on one side of the fault north of Denver have been found to be from 500 to 1,000 feet deeper than on the other side, due to the sharp slip or fault in the earth's surface.

Certain evidences of foldings in the earth's surface have been discovered in southeastern Colorado, and near Haswell, just west of Eads, in Kiowa county, there have been reports of very slight earth tremors within recent years, according to Mr. Lupton.

It is possible, geologists believe, that the folding in southeastern Colorado in the vicinity of the Sierra Grande arch, which runs from its highest point about 40 miles east of Raton, N. M., northeasterly into Colorado, may be gradually through the centuries pushing up a new range of mountains.

If the readjustment of the earth's crust were perfect when the faults became inactive and "dead," ages ago, and if there have been no substantial readjustments of weight on the earth's surface since then, the likelihood is, geologists say, that these faults will never cause earthquake shocks again for centuries or ages.

OIL USES ARE WIDENED

CHEMISTRY TO OPEN WIDE FIELD, SCIENTIST SAYS

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 6.—(By Associated Press).—Dr. James F. Norris of Cambridge, Mass., president of the American Chemical society, addressing the annual society dinner here tonight, declared that petroleum was a source of untold wealth which, when tapped by chemistry, will yield some of science's greatest triumphs.

Professor Norris said: "We are producers of vast quantities of petroleum products. We have the opportunities to develop great chemical industries based on an abundance of raw material and we use this possible source of untold riches principally only to move from place to place.

"Let American chemists center their attention on the many fascinating problems awainting solution in this field. By cracking the crude oil we can make hundreds of compounds soluble as sources for myriads of products that will make over our life.

"Chemistry in America is forging ahead at a rate that startles the world. We have only begun our activities and there is much more to do before we may finally say that we lead the world.

"There must be close cooperation between the universities and the industries so as to increase the productiveness of research."

MAYOR IS UNDECIDED

INDIANAPOLIS MAN WILL LEAVE PUBLIC OFFICE

INDIANAPOLIS.—Lew Shank, who has combined an intermittent career of public service with auctioneering, horse racing, acting and operation of a storage plant, will retire again to private life at end of this year, when his second term as mayor of Indianapolis expires.

Shank has not decided whether he will climb back onto the auction block or resume management of his storage plant. His friends say he no longer has any inclination for the race track, and he has said he will not be lured back to the stage, where, as a professional humorist, he attracted attention throughout the country some years ago.

His present objective is to cap his career as mayor with the purchase of the 650-acre Laurel hill estate and mansion near the city for a municipal park and country club. The property, valued at more than $1,000,000, belonged to Stoughton Fletcher, Indianapolis capitalist, and is now in the hands of trustees. Shank, conceiving the idea of acquiring it for a city playground, recently inserted page advertisements in Indianapolis newspapers urging citizens to visit it. Thousands of residents inspected the estate on the day set, but much opposition has arise to purchase or lease of the estate by the city.

Since the day Shank decided suddenly, over a card table in the back room of a saloon, to run for the mayoralty of Indiana's metropolis, he has kept his city and state in the limelight and he has become a notable character. He has been unusually well informed on all branches of city government, he has shown aptitude for business administration, and he has been indomitably persistent in attainment of his municipal objectives.

Shank aspired last year to the republican gubernatorial nomination but was beaten. He met indirect defeat again in the city primaries last May when Ralph Lemcke, who had Shank's support for the mayoralty, lost the republican nomination to John L. Duval, present county treasurer, leaving a breach in republican party ranks which has not yet healed completely.
