It was at Bingen, soon after the arrival of the trio, they said, where a quarrel between Murray and Willos occurred. "My determination to break into an old baggage car had nothing to do with the quarrel," said Willos, "for there wasn't any baggage car there. We mixed-not a fight. but just a nasty disagreementbecause Tom wanted all of us to get on the next westbound freight. Kelley and I wanted to get to the east. I made Tom mad and he just simply decided to leave us." Willos and Kelley said they planned their getaway in the automobile stolen at Bingen as they proceeded with their series of burglaries. They entered the Lewis store primarily to appease their hunger. Finding an unlocked safe and a till handy they helped themselves. They also fitted themselves from Mr. Lewis' stock of shoes and took along extra pairs.
