THE RETURNING
By Naomi Phelps

As homing gulls at wintry eventide
Seek refuge from a wild and wind-swept sea,
E'en so this tired and saddened soul of mine,
Returns at last to seek repose in thee.

In here a time there is I may forget life's greed,
In here find rest and know no pang of fear;
In here I may hope again and faith anew,
Or know the gracious solace of a tear.

Thus humbly I return at eventide,
On weary pinions braving life's wide sea,
Guided by eyes that cleave the gathering mist
To find a haven safe, dear one, in thee.
