Our Water Power Resources Within a radius of 100 miles of Salem there can be developed 300,-000 to 400,000 horsepower of water power-

And an extension of the radius to 200 miles would include nearly all of the great water powers of the state, running up to three to four millions-

And engineers find that with modern methods of transmission 200 miles is no distance worth worrying about in the transmission of hydro-electric power; that it is merely a matter of longer transmission lines supported by more tall poles. In California electric power is conducted 400 miles or more from the points of the generating plants to the places
