Californiaans Visit Old Friends
Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Reed, whose home was formerly in Eugene Falls, Minn., where they knew Mr. and Mrs. O. Aurland, and where Mrs. Reed was a school mate and friend of Alma Dempsey, who resides in Rickreall, drove in Monday evening, giving Mr. and Mrs. Aurland a very happy surprise. They are on the last portion of a trip which has taken them through Colorado, Illinois, Massachusetts, Washington, D. C., Minnesota, Indiana, Iowa, Nebraska, Idaho, Wyoming, with a short stop in Seattle, and down through Olympia to Falls City in one day's drive. The trip has occupied three months, and so far they have covered 12,500 miles, enjoying every bit of the time, the trip through Yellowstone park being especially enjoyable.
In all their travels they found the people cheerful, with good crops everywhere. Many people said they had been to the Pacific coast and a great many of these said they were coming back. Mrs. Reed said that of all the country they had seen, Washington and Oregon looked the best to her, and the Willamette valley pleased especially. This was their first visit to Falls City, and while they could make but a short stay, enjoyed every minute of it.
Mrs. Reed's mother, Mrs. Hindahl, spent about two months here in Falls City 14 years ago, the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Aurland.
Mr. and Mrs. Reed had with them on the trip east Mr. and Mrs. Jamison from Long Beach, who shared their journey as far as Minnesota, where they all enjoyed fishing in the lakes, having great sport in Otter Tail lake, pickerel, pike and bass being real game fish. They had one night at Horseshoe lake, with fine fishing.
Mr. and Mrs. Aurland accompanied their guests to Rickreall Tuesday morning, where they spent a few hours with the Dempseys. The trip on to Long Beach will be made as rapidly as possible, as Mr. Reed is engaged in the construction business there and could spare no more time this summer for pleasuring.

person and it is believed that this money was the object of the later attack.
Early in the evening Lloyd arranged with Irwin Baun for the trip to Albany but after that time, Irwin, who complained of illness, persuaded his brother to substitute for him. Before the arrangement was agreed upon the brothers had an argument as to whether the younger of the two would substitute for his brother but assent to the plan was finally given by Clinton. He left Independence with the trio at 9:15 o'clock.
That the three men did not cover that the change in drivers had been made or that they presumed that Clinton might also carry money on his person, is held by police to be the most logical explanation of the tragedy.
Baun's body was found lying at the side of the road with the feet protruding into the roadway by Sheriff Frank Richards of Albany, who, with O. H. Hoy of the same city had been visiting at a hop yard near Independence. The crime was discovered about 10 o'clock, supposedly about 15 minutes after the body had been thrown onto the road.
Baffling evidence which refutes the robbery theory was found in the fact that Clinton still had upon his person when his body was discovered a wallet containing $12.30 in cash and his watch. One of his pants pockets had been turned inside out, but as far as is known none of his property was taken.
A second theory under examination by authorities is that Baun was killed because he refused to carry booze in his car at the demand of the trio. The three men are known to have been in Independence, apparently without any means of livelihood, for at least a week, and to have made three trips to nearby hop yards where it is possible they might have been serving liquor customers.
Baun was first slugged with a heavy dull instrument that fractured the back to the skull and which presumably struck him from the rear while he was driving. He had also been shot three times with a .38 caliber revolver loaded with steel jacket bullets. One of the shots grazed his breast, a second entered his back on the left side and left the body near the right breast, while the third entered from near the same point and lodged against the right shoulder blade. The second bullet was found in his clothing.
No clue to the identity of the two companions of Lloyd had been uncovered last night. The three were first seen together in Independence last Thursday. They were again seen together last Monday when an Independence business man observed them eating together in a restaurant.
Fate dealt a hard hand to the plans of the trio. The first imposition of misfortune came in the fact that Sheriff Richards followed the men in their flight down the lonely road probably less than fifteen minutes behind. Authorities believe that the three deliberately chose the neglected spot to hide the body and were probably halted in their plans by the sight of the lights from Richards' car which would have been visible for more than a mile on the higher road. The road runs through a swamp which would have provided an excellent hiding place for the fatal evidence.
Misfortune interposed for the second time Wednesday morning when the direction of escape taken by the men was ascertained by discovery of the car in The Dalles. Police officers both to the north and south were notified Tuesday night, but it was generally accepted that the three were headed south. Yesterday news of the murder was broadcast by radio from Portland and it was through this channel that authorities at

Remus REPUDIATES ENTIRE TESTIMONY
Statements on Daugherty Investigation Declared Made Under Duress
ATLANTA, Ga., Sept. 2.—(By Associated Press).—After being released from the Atlanta federal penitentiary today, George Remus, wealthy Cincinnati bootleg prize, issued a statement in which he repudiated his entire testimony before the senate Daugherty investigation committee last year.
Remus was rearrested immediately upon his release here and late in the day the party left for Dayton, Ohio, where the prisoner will institute habeas corpus proceedings for his freedom on the ground that another sentence imposed on him at the time he was sent to Atlanta was to be concurrent.
In his statement, which was given voluntarily, he said he had denied his testimony before the committee investigating Attorney General Daugherty while under duress, and after "many promises" had been made to him.
His repudiation became public on August 29, 1924. He had testified before the committee several months previously. After making his declaration to the press today, Remus wrote and signed the following:
"The repudiation as made by me in reference to the testimony before the Wheeler committee as to the payment of monies to Jess Smith, to wit, $250,000 to $300,000 made in an affidavit given to James N. Linton, was not based upon any facts and James N. Linton knew that when I made such a statement it was not the truth.

"He was a guest of Warden Sartain for a period of a week before I signed same. I signed one and gave same to Blair Coan, setting forth that I paid some one in Washington $250,000 to $300,000 and did not mention name of party the three weeks before. Then they sent James N. Linton to have me deny in toto, making many promises before I signed same."
Remus described Coan as "Daugherty's right hand man." Linton is an Ohio lawyer and was attorney for A. E. Sartain this year when the latter was convicted of accepting bribes from wealthy prisoners at the penitentiary.
In his testimony before the senate committee, Remus declared that he had often met Jess Smith, now deceased, but then a friend of Daugherty, and had given him thousands of dollars in order to get liquor permits to continue his (Remus) bootlegging, without interference from the department of justice and to escape serving sentences on charges pending against him.
His repudiation stated he had never met Daugherty or Smith. While serving his term for conspiracy to violate the prohibition law, Remus said in this repudiation he was visited by Harry Stern, a lawyer of the committee, who informed him the committee would "throw themselves behind" him and would get me out of here as soon as possible.
Remus further asserted then that Stern told him the committee was "out" to get Daugherty and that it was common knowledge in Washington that the Cincinnati man had paid some one in Washington between $250,000 and $300,000.
Stern said he wanted me to make a statement that would directly implicate Harry M. Daugherty as United States attorney general in graft money," he continued in the August repudiation.
Desiring his liberty, Remus

The pageant will be known as "The Light of the Trail" and will depict the coming of missionaries to the north west in the early days. Between 125 and 150 people will take part in the production.
In declaring this affidavit was false Remus today said, "I am ready to stand by my testimony before the committee because that was the truth."
Senator Burton K. Wheeler of the committee issued a statement at the time denying Remus' charges relative to the committee.
