nto court instead of before a board of appeal are some of the fesires of stockmen of Washingon, according to testimony placed today before the subcom-mittee of the senate committee on public lands which held a hearing here today. Senator R. N. Stanfield of Oregon was chariman. Those who testified were Thomas J. Drumheller, C. M. Rader, Herbert C. Bryson and Eugene Thomas of Walla Walla and J. F. Sears, Stanley Coffin and O. D.

Gibson of Yakima. "The whole system of administration of public lands is wrong," said Mr. Bryson. "Many of our regulations are detrimental to the stock and to the service itself. There should be fewer regulations conducted by the government at the end of the season."

Increase of grazing rates will mean either serious curtailment of costs to the growers it was emphasized.

Sheepmen stand opposed to any increase in present grazing fees, or against any scale of fees which fice at the YMCA, placed 650 perwill create a revenue over and above the needs of maintaining the forests, according to the testimony. They want lease terms running from 10 to 20 years with specified areas rather than permits to graze so many head; the restoration of areas withdrawn from grazing privileges for the protection of municipal water supplies: and a board of arbitration to which appeals can be taken from what are considered arbitrary rulings on the part of forest supervisors.

That sheepmen are more inerested in conserving the national forests and building up their car-Drumheller and emphasized by the month. The report shows an ing has lessened the fire hazards in the forests and that the herder and their assistants really add to the nation's fire patrol.

Increased fees and burdensome regulations which tax and hinder the development of the industry are reflected increased costs to the consuming public on whom the burden will ultimately fall, said Mr. Coffin.
