OWN YOUR OWN HOME!

The instinct for a home is as natural in humanity as the instinct to mate. A young couple beginning family life in their own home, secure at once a back ground, an anchorage.

Children brought up in their own home have the supreme advantage of a domestic sentiment that is one of the most valuable of spiritual possessions.

Without their own house, there is an inescapable sense of being transients, of having no firm foundation for family life.

We have several new bungalows, 4 rooms and breakfast nook, we will sell, just like rent.

CHAPTER F115

THE WAY KATHERINE LEAPED TO THE EMERGENCY

The mother of a child over one year old is generally like a well-trained fireman in her ability to awaken from sleep and slide down the pole without loss of time.

I had no knowledge of the meaning of the hoarse strangled noises I had just heard from my mother-in-law's room—for I never had heard anything just like it—but that it meant illness or danger for my small son, I knew instinctively. And even as I sprang from the bed, I thrust my feet into my felt bedroom slippers, and snatching my bathrobe put it on as I ran down the corridor.

Swift as I was, however, Katherine reached my mother-in-law's door at the same second I did. I pushed the door open unceremoniously, asking wildly as I did so: "Oh! What is it?"

"Croup by the sound," Katherine returned laconically, and then with a little cry, I ran forward to the bed, where Junior was in the agony of getting his breath standing upright, his eyes glazed his face dark and convulsed with fright, and a brassy, raucous, horrible sound issuing from his contorted lips. His grandmother —her face gray with fright —was holding his thrashing little body as best she could and she spoke tensely as she saw us.

"It's one of the worst croup cases I ever saw. Do something, quickly."

"This minute," Katherine returned composedly, even cheerily, and then I saw, what my fright had not permitted me to notice before, that she had in her hands a steaming teakettle, a basin and a bottle.

"Give him to Madge, Mother Graham," Katherine said in composed, assured tones. "She is stronger and can hold him firmly, and I need you to hold the blanket. You are used to croup and she isn't."

Quick Relief.

When there is a real emergency my mother-in-law rises to it wonderfully. There was no hint of her usual pique for any infringement of her authority in her prompt surrendering of the idolized little body to my grasp.

"Take him in your arms and sit in this chair," Katherine directed, busy in pouring boiling water from the kettle into the basin. "Keep his arms and legs down so that he can't upset this."

She had added the contents of the bottle to the steaming water in the basin as she spoke, and she turned to my mother-in-law, who, with evident understanding of her wishes, was standing close by me with a big and thick blanket spread out over her arms.

"All ready," she said. "Put it over both heads. This will be unpleasant, Madge, but it can't be helped."

The thick folds of the blanket enveloped my head, the upper portion of my body and the entire figure of Junior. Then the lower edge of the blanket was lifted and Katherine's hand thrust in the steaming basin.

"Hold his face as close to it as you can without burning him," she directed, and I obeyed her, half-strangled myself with the fumes coming from the basin. But in only a few seconds the awful choking ceased, and I felt my little lad's tense body relax against me.

"Grannie's Lamb."

"There, that will do for a little!" Katherine decided. "Just hand me that other blanket please. Thank you. Now if you'll ring the bell for Katie, please. We must have a fire here right away."

I heard my mother-in-law's footsteps going to the side of the room where she had a bell installed so that she may summon my little maid at her convenience.

It is an arrangement at which I have rebelled secretly, and I know Katie detests it, but now I was devoutly thankful for it. And then the swathing blanket was lifted from me, and another blanket wrapped quickly around Junior, while Katherine wiped the steam from his face.

"He'll do for a few minutes?" she said, looking at him gravely. "I'll get something to give him."

"For a few minutes?" I echoed, panic-stricken. "Do you mean he's going to have another of these things?"

"We're in for a fight," she answered, "but don't lose your nerve. No child ever died of croup yet. It gives most parents heart failure, though."

She was out of the room as she spoke, and I heard her fleet feet running down the hall. I clasped my baby boy closer and saw that he was too exhausted by his paroxysm to move or cry. Mother Graham came back into the room and, white-faced, bent over him.

"Grannie's lamb," she said unsteadily, and there was room in my heart beside my own anxiety for a profound pity for her. My curiosity stirred feebly also, for there was something in her tortured eyes even more poignant than normal anxiety would bring there.

Cuban Government Grants Privileges to US Tourists

HAVANA. — Citizens of the same privileges given Cuban citizens by the immigration authorities, under a recent department ruling.

The treasury department has exempted tourist and other travelers from payment of the one-quarter of one per cent tax on money above $40 taken out of the country by travelers. Secretary of the Treasure Cartaya authorized steamship companies to issue identification cards to passengers, which, on their leaving the country, absolves them from either making a statement as to the amount of money they are carrying or payment of the tax.
