THE ACTRESS

By Naomi Phelps

Awake!
The sands of thy brief hour quickly fall.
Ah, quaff deep draughts of this thy cup of joy,
Ere muted by thy praise,
Ere silent be thy fall,
Ere bended knee shall rise to bend no more,
Ere withered be thy wreaths of roses red,
Ere from thy silent, mouldering dust
Shall blossom laurels for another's head.

Birthday Surprise Party

A pleasant birthday surprise party was given at the G. E. Knit-ten home on Bellevue street on Sunday honoring the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Kuiten. A host of beautiful flowers were arranged about the rooms. An elaborate dinner was served at noon with Mrs. John Teckenberg, Mrs. John Douen, Mrs. Shellberg and Mrs. Patterson assisting the hostess. During the afternoon a number of lovely gifts were showered upon Mrs. Kuiten. Music and conversation were enjoyed during the day.

The guest group included Mr. and Mrs. G. D. Bowen of Silverton, Mr. and Mrs. John Cornforth, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Martin, Mr. and Mrs. John Teckenberg of Macley, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Hartley of Jefferson, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Howard and Mrs. Flora Howard of Portland, Mr. and Mrs. John Plank, Mr. and Mrs. John Printz, Mrs. Otto Shellberg, Mrs. Fred Robertson, Miss Irene Hartley, Arthur and Rex Hartley, Delbert Patterson, Edith Patterson, Fred Rice and Harry Martin, Jr.

Miss Hodge Visits

Miss Frances Hodge, who is a member of the high school faculty at Springfield, Oregon, is spending the week end as the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Hodge.

Guests of Mrs. Hager

Mr. and Mrs. N. S. Weber of Eagle Creek, Wash., and Mrs. John Blessinger, and Miss Maude Wright, all of Dayton, Wash., were house guests last week of Mrs. Cordelia Hager.

Loan Exhibits of Interest

An interesting number of attractive loan exhibits were featured this year in the art department of the state fair. Notable among these was the private collection of Chinese cloisonne and embroideries owned by Mrs. A. O. Cartasian of Portland, and filling an entire glass case.

A beautiful jardiniere and a number of art tiles were loaned by the Art and Tile company of Portland, all articles of their own designing.

A large group of pictures was shown through the courtesy of the Art Museum of Portland, displaying work of both first and second year pupils. The Oregon Camera club also loaned a beautiful exhibit.

Of particular interest were the exquisite water colors and French etchings which were brought directly from France. This collection was loaned by the Western Picture Framing company.

While outside the realm of private collections, Miss Genevieve Barnes' china exhibit commanded consistent attention throughout the week, as did Mrs. W. H. Thomas' arts and crafts display. Other successful exhibitors, of course, include Mr. H. W. Ensign of Suther-lin, and Mr. Clyde Keller and Ralph Gilbert.

Of interest to Salem people was the portrait of John H. Cradlebaugh which was painted of him when he was a lad of four in Tennessee.

Trip Up The MacKenzie

Mrs. Frank Snedecor left on Thursday for Eugene where she joined Mrs. Charles A. Gray for an interesting week end trip up the Mackenzie. Mrs. Gray, Mrs. Snedecor's hostess, is house mother this year at the Alpha Xi Delta society on the University of Oregon campus.

Guests For Fair Week

Mrs. W. B. McDonald of Portland was the house guest during state fair week of Mrs. C. P. Bishop.

Textile Exhibit At Fair

One of the most interesting exhibits at the state fair which closed last night was that in the textile department, comprising needlework of the finest sort. While the exhibitors had the advantage of increased space this year, the result was practically as crowded as ever due to the largeness of the exhibit.

The group exhibits, each showing twelve or more pieces, were both numerous and elaborate this year. In this division, the first prize went to the Sweet Briar club, the members of which reside on the Wallace Road. This is the seventh time they have taken this honor. Notable among the other exhibits was that made by the Royal Neighbors' Sewing club which meets periodically during the year.

One of the most valuable, as well as one of the most interesting entries made was that of a real handwoven cashmere shawl by Mrs. L. R. Le Fuirgy which has been handed down in her husband's family for many more years than she can even tell. Such a shawl as was on display, no doubt, antedates the Paisley.

Two handwoven bedspreads also attracted great interest, one of which is over one hundred years old, the second having been woven in 1842.

Of further interest was the immense crocheted rug—measuring nine by thirteen feet—for which the owner has refused an offer of $1200. The rug display as a whole is unusually attractive. Ella McMunn exhibited a beautiful rug for the making of which she has been saving silk for the past twenty years.

An atmosphere was added by the fifty year old spinning wheel loaned by Mr. Yenne of Salem. The wheel was originally brought to the states from Germany.

An unusually fine display of handmade handkerchiefs, the needlework of Mrs. Lyman Shirey of Woodburn, was on display.

An interesting amount of hand-anger work was featured in various articles entered, as well as quite a bit of handmade tapestry. The exhibit in table linen was especially large this year, while that showing work made by women over eighty years of age was very limited.

The domestic science exhibits lacked the popularity of those in the domestic art group. However, some notable canning entries were made. This is a department in which it is surprising that the public does not take more interest.

Yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock Dr. Kantner officiated at the wedding at which Miss Winifred Taylor became the bride of Mr. Paul Noack. The bride was dressed in an attractive costume of rosewood
