Old Faithful Geyser Is Still Shooting Regularly

YELLOWSTONE, National Park—Old Faithful is still faithful, despite the report that the famous old geyser is blowing off steam and hot water every 67 minutes instead of every 50. Old Faithful has been shooting punctually every 60 minutes this season, the same as in previous years. The only variation is at the end of the summer, when, due to seasonal water changes, the geyser always spouts at slightly longer intervals. The superintendent said Old Faithful never spouts better nor more regularly than this year.

Beets Are Shipped

The first shipment of beets to be tested were expressed by the Chamber of Commerce Wednesday. The beets were grown by local farmers from seed furnished by the Utah-Idaho Sugar company of Bellingham, Wash., and are to be returned there for testing of the sugar content. A letter was received Wednesday by the Chamber of Commerce from I. W. Timpen, manager of the company, asking that the beets be expressed immediately upon receiving them, so that the test might be made before they have a chance to dry out. As soon as the rest of the beets out are turned into the Chamber of Commerce another shipment will be made to the company.
