WEB OF EVIDENCE CLOSES ON MURRAY

 mentioned during the testimony. Upon cross examination Warden A. M. Dalrymple told of writing found in the cell occupied by Jones and Kelley.
 "Tonight at 8 o'clock I will leave this place dead or alive," Jones is said to have written.
 "Give me liberty or give me death," was the sentiment expressed by his cellmate who signed himself "Crowbar" Kelley.
 Warden Dalrymple occupied most of the time in the witness stand during the afternoon session. He gave all the details of the break, from the time he saw Murray threatening Crawford until he stepped into the guard tower and saw John Sweeney dead. Under questions put by the district attorney, Dalrymple stated that the complement of guns in the prison arsenal consists of 22 rifles, five shotguns, and five revolvers, besides some arms belonging to individual guards at the prison.
 The state rifles are of .30-30 caliber, and the revolvers .38 caliber. Mr. Dalrymple stated. He also told of the position of the gun cabinets, and also of the equipment in the towers overlooking the prison yards.
 Several photographs offered in evidence by the state were identified by Mr. Dalrymple, who explained to the jury their significance and pointed out and identified the various towers and windows under discussion.
 Warden Dalrymple spoke in detail of the prison break on August 12, and was the first one to see the convicts as they came down from the roof. He was writing a letter in his office at the time, he said, and hearing loud shouting, turned and saw Murray in an altercation with Robert Crawford, a prison employe. Murray, the witness said, was brandishing a knife. As the warden looked on, the defendant rushed around the corner of the building, in the direction of the arsenal. Mr. Dalrymple, in an effort to prevent him from reaching the place where the arms were stored, rushed to the door, but was too late to prevent entrance, he said.

With Murray guarding the door with a knife, the warden went to get the only available gun outside of the prison walls, in his own house, across the street from the prison.
 He secured this shotgun, he stated, and took up a position near the prison garage in order to be at a vantage spot if the escaping convicts should attempt to take a prison car. The men, however, did not attempt this, but started in the direction of the state hospital. Dalrymple shot at them. One of the men wavered, he said, but did not fall.
 At this moment, Lute Savage, a guard, came around the corner of the wall. "Well, warden, they've got me—this time," he told Dalrymple, pulling aside his coat and displaying his shirt covered with blood on the left side. He had been shot a fraction of an inch below the heart. The warden also told in detail of the finding of the bodies of Guards Holman and Sweeney, and of Oregon Jones, convict.
 John Davidson and Peter White, both guards, J. E. Nesmith, turnkey at the time of the break, and James Hawthorne, employed at the prison, were among the witnesses called by the state. As far as the salient facts of the case were concerned, the testimony corresponded.
 Davidson declared that when he reached tower one, the four convicts in the arsenal opened fire, wounding Holman in the arm. Later, Davidson said, the convicts made a break across the prison yard and into the guard house. Davidson had left his station before this, he stated, and had placed himself in open view, although outside of the iron fence surrounding the prison yard. "The convicts came out of the turnkey's office single file, the witness said, with Murray leading. Murray is said to have opened fire at Davidson with a rifle while at a distance of only ten feet.
 During the entire court session yesterday, Murray, the defendant in the murder trial, occupied himself by taking notes of the statements made by the witnesses. When a particularly interesting part of the testimony would come up, Murray, with pencil poised, would listen attentively, straining ahead in his chair. He then jot-ted down what evidently were notes, and shoved them over to his attorney. He did not appear worried.

Silverton
 Silverton, Ore., Oct. 8.—(Special.)—A. Dirsch suffered a broken shoulder blade and a broken rib besides several bruises when his car upset between Silverton and Scotts Mills Thursday morning. Mr. Dirsch, who was driving, did not notice the corner turning off from the pavement toward Scotts Mills until it was too late. He tried, however, to make the turn, but turned to short, upsetting the car. Mrs. Dirsch received a number of bruises and was badly shaken up but otherwise uninjured. It was thought Otto Welman brought them into Silverton in his truck.
 Joseph Brockhaus has just completed the building of a large silo measuring 12 by 36. Mr. Brockhaus is a prominent dairyman having about twenty cows at present. Mr. Brockhaus has lots of confidence in Oregon's dairy prospects, and plans to double his own herd.
 Joseph Uphoff and his sister,

Betty spent a pleasant social evening at Salem Wednesday.
 The women of the Alter society met Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. E. Domagalla with a very good attendance. A good deal of business was discussed among which was the promoting of the arrangements for the opening for the new social hall at St. Paul's school. Opening Plans were also discussed for the annual bazaar held on Armistice day.
 E. Domagalla was at Salem Tuesday night to attend the installation of new officers of the Knights of Columbus.
 Mrs. A. W. Simmons, Miss Winona Palmer and M. Palmer were business callers at Salem Wednesday afternoon.
 A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Earl Adams at the Silverton hospital Wednesday. Mr. and Mrs. Adams live near Scotts Mills.
 Mr. and Mrs. Otto Legard were hosts at a delightful little dinner party Tuesday evening at their home on North Water street. Covers were laid for Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Ingram, Mr. and Mrs. Nye Bristol, Mr. and Mrs. Earl J. Adams, Clifford Rue and Mr. and Mrs. Legard.

PACIFIC WOODMEN HOLD BIG SESSION

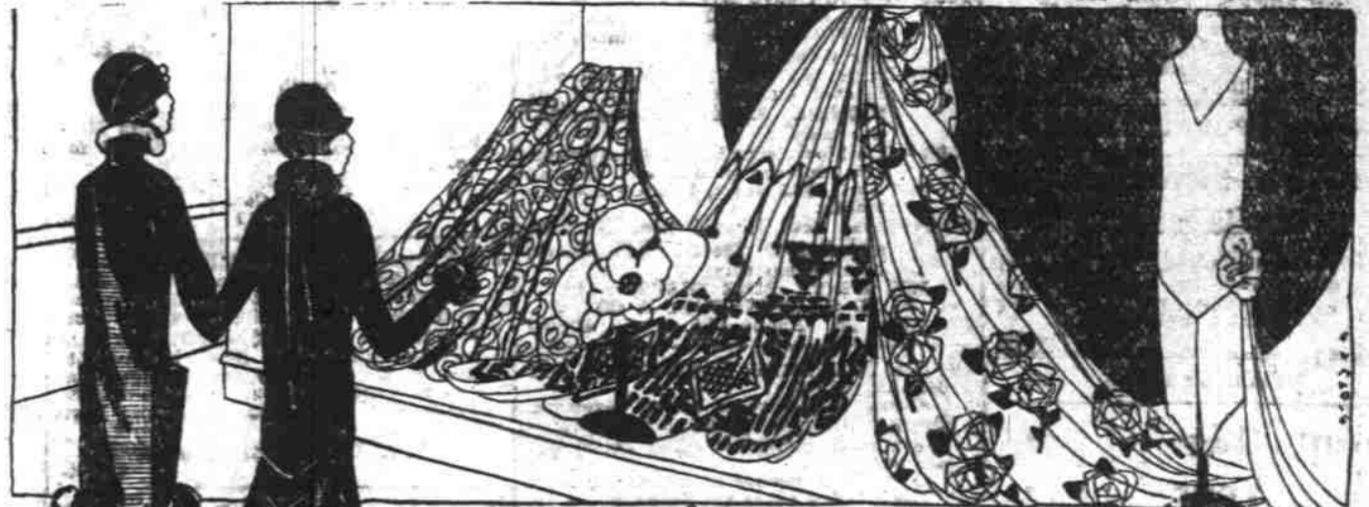

Capitol Camp No. 1 Is Host to Visiting Organizations of District

The largest meeting ever held by the Pacific Woodmen Life association in the state of Oregon was held here last night at which time Capitol Camp No. 1 of Salem had as their guests, members from the camps at Portland, St. Helens, Dallas, Philomath, Corvallis, Junction City and Eugene. The full ritualistic services were conferred upon a large class of candidates by the officers and team of Columbia Camp No. 2 of Portland. State managers J. F. Murray, of Washington and F. A. Beard of Oregon were present and assisted with the work.
 The Pacific Woodmen Life only began operating in Oregon last March and is making a wonderful growth. Twelve camps having been established to date and several others to be started soon. The meeting was held at Fraternities hall, 240 North Liberty street and a banquet was served following the meeting. The committee in charge were E. H. Leach, George Donaldson and Charles Walker.

 State headquarters for Oregon are located at 316 United States National bank building.

RAIL LINES CLASH OVER PRIOR RIGHTS

 by the Oregon Trunk were considered too low for a first class main line by George W. Boschke, chief engineer of the Southern Pacific company, who gave the costs on the construction work that his company had carried out and said that the plans of the Oregon Trunk would cost thousands of dollars more than had been estimated if the line is to be a first-class one.
