fall of Johnson and the Senators, but in the final analysis it was also due to the fielding weakness of Peckinpaugh, whose two errors came at critical junctures of Pirate rallies in the seventh and eighth, as well as to the relief pitching of Ray Kremer, who held the Senators to one hit in four innings, after relieving Morrison, and to Rube Oldham, who blanked the former champions in the ninth, striking out Rice and Goslin in a flourishing finish that sent the big crowd on to the muddy field in ecstasy.

This was high spots of a battle jammed with thrills from start to finish, the mere elements in a struggle that flasted in a murky, rain drenched background while the champions of two major leagues fought it out for supremacy in the mud and a drizzling shower that fell almost continuously. It was in such a setting that the Pirates, proving their mettle as daring covers of the high seas of Forbes field battered out their third straight victory over the Senators, completing their startling comeback after it seemed their cause was hopeless.

Today's battle was expected to be a duel between the two moundsmen who had each won two games in the series with Johnson and Aldridge aping the victory that would give either imperishable fame and glory. But instead it turned out to be a free slugging drama, Aldridge, wild and erratic, passed out of the picture in the first inning after issuing three passes and making two wild pitches, while Johnson was battered for 15 hits and neely always in trouble. The big train had held the slugging Buccaneers to one run and eleven hits in his first two games, but he had nothing with which to check his opponents today. His greatest speed held no terrors for the Pirates and his curves had no baffling stuff in them.

It was apparent from the start that Johnson faced trouble but he might have pulled out the game had it not been for the damaging misplays by Peckinpaugh that figured largely in the Pirate offensives of the seventh and eighth innings. Hard and timely hitting with Max Carey's bludgeon most prominent, gave the Pirates three runs in the third and another in the fifth, but their next big spurt in the seventh started when Peckinpaugh dropped Eddie Moore's high fly and their decisive rally came in the eighth after a wild throw to second by the veteran shortstop with a third out in sight that would have prevented any scoring.

But for that high toss to Harris in an attempt to force Moore on Carey's grounder, which pulled Bucky off the bag when he caught it, allowing Moore to pull up safe at second and Carey to reach first, Peckinpaugh might have been the hero instead of the "goat" of the final game, for in the first half of the eighth he had driven the ball over the barrier in front of the eighth he had driven to ball over the barrier in front of the scoreboard for a home run that put the Senators into a 7 to 6 lead.

Peckinpaugh's error in the seventh was followed by Carey's second double and a triple by Traynor, who was thrown out at the plate trying to stretch his hit to a homer.

Two were out in the eighth before the Pirates got in action again on a double by Earl Smith. This was the signal for a rush of Pittsburgh reserves, Yde replacing Smith on the bases and Bigbee going to bat for Kremer. There was a terrific roar as Bigbee's two base smash scored Yde with the tying run and the din continued as Moore walked and was safe on Peck's high throw to second. Thus the bases were filled as Cuyler strode to the plate. Johnson, knowing it was the crisis, used every resource at his command. He called for sawdust to cover the quagmire in the pitching box. He worked the corners with his fast ball, but with the count three and two, Cuyler swung and the ball streaked to far right field. The tumula was at its height as four Pirate runs streaked about the bases. It was only partially stilled as the umpires called Cuyler back to second and Carey to third, ruling the blow a double, although the ball was not extricated from its tarpaulin resting place and returned to the infield until after Cuyler had dashed over the plate.

Thus the Pirates left the battle ground decisively from every angle, outplaying their opponents in every department, by the game and beating down the strongest bulwarks of the Senators.

Fire loss in Klamath country this year was only about 30,000 feet of timber.

DINNER STORIES

The progress of many cities is held back by petty jealousies among its citizens. They get a good start on the road to better things and then tie up and fuss awhile.

That petty jealousy about trivial things is all foolishness. It only brings about discord and strife, where harmony should prevail.

That the importance of the industries of a city should never be forgotten. No opportunity should be lost to encourage and assist in their growth and development.

That in the success of home industries rests the development of a community and the prosperity of all who live there.

That every citizen should believe in the greatness of his or her home city, its industries and the future that is ahead of it, and should give to it their whole-hearted support and never waver in this duty.

Some foods are long on taste but short on nourishment.

Some clothes are long on looks but short on quality.

Some people are long on promises but short on performances. Some cities are long on good intentions but short on actions. Some organizations are long on plans but short on results. Many cities are long on good starters but short on good finishers.
