

MY HUSBAND'S LOVE

ADELE GARRISON'S NEW PHASE - OF - REVELATIONS OF A WIFE

Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc. WHY A TORTURING DOUBT CAME TO TROUBLE MADGE Mrs. Fetsy Marks straightened herself and regarded the work of her hands with distinct approval. Then dextrously flicking out the cord of the electric iron she turned off the switch, and taking up the pad of paper, wrote a few words swiftly upon it. Tearing off the page, she thrust it into my hands, tipped to the door gave a nervous glance up and down the hall and then made her noiseless way to her own quarters. A muffled click audible only to ears strained like mine, told me that she was safely within her own room, and I read the words she had written. "There!"—she wrote exactly as she talked—"These are the roses crow now. But don't let Nibs know who done 'em—stick to it you're the party. See you later. Better tear this up." I smiled at the melodramatic little finishing touch, even as I followed her advice and tore the paper into shreds. I had watched her pressing carefully and to my unexperienced eyes she appeared to have imitated in the pressing of the evening clothes the properly pressed suit Dicky had given me as a model. At any rate, I knew I could not have accomplished the task satisfactorily so it was an appeased conscience that I carefully draped the garments over my arm and returning to the bedroom, spread them out upon the bed. There was but one thing that troubled me. From a child, I have hated above all things to take credit that does not belong to me. But, knowing the unreasoning dislike Dicky had taken to Mrs. Marks I saw the wisdom
