

THE LAST OF THE LANE CARAVAN GONE

The Granddaughter of Oregon's First Governor, General Lane, Passes

(Writing from San Francisco, under the date of Oct. 16, to the Oregonian, Eugene Shelby says:)
A few months ago The Oregonian announced the death of Simon R. Lane of Roseburg, and Mr. Stinson contributed a sketch of the Lane family, dating back to 1843, when General Joseph Lane became the first governor of the territory of Oregon. After serving a short term as governor, General Lane was sent back to Washington as territorial delegate to congress. On his return to Oregon in 1853 he brought his entire family from Indiana, the party numbering approximately 25 to make homes in the sparsely settled territory.

When Simon Lane died, the last member of General Lane's immediate family passed away and but one member of the caravan of 1853 survived, Mrs. Frank P. Hogan was an infant when this trip was made—the youngest of the group. Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Flood (Mrs. Flood being a daughter of General Lane), settled down in Roseburg and remained there many years. When this child attained womanhood she married Frank P. Hogan and went to Spokane to live. There her daughters were born. Ill health finally induced the Hogans to seek a different climate and a home in San Gabriel, Cal., was founded.

Just recently, after long sufferings, Mrs. Hogan responded to the inevitable call, almost within shadow of the old, beautiful San Gabriel mission. Seventy-two years after the Lane Pilgrimage to the territory of Oregon the last participant fades out of the picture.

Frank P. Hogan, husband of the deceased, was one of the most prominent of the old time sheriffs and detectives of Oregon. While he was sheriff of Douglas county, and afterwards, in the eighties and nineties, he captured a number of desperate men. In the early eighties, he went after "Black Bart," the famous stage robber of those times, and would have taken him, but for the fact that a Wells-Fargo detective was on the same trail and got there a little ahead of Mr. Hogan.

Britain and Turkey may go to war, but they can at least console themselves with the reflection that they are used to it.

CONSPIRACY HELD CONVICTS' CRIME

It was at this stage, Mr. King stated, that the two convicts, Willos and Kiley, heard cries of the guards: "Shoot them, shoot them." "Believing they would be killed, and seeing Murray and Jones coming out of the turnkey's office," Mr. King said, "Willos and Kiley followed them. Kelley was unarmed until he picked up an unloaded shotgun in the tower as he was dropping to the ground outside."

According to the defense, Willos was armed with a revolver, and although he fired it, shot haphazardly, not aiming at anyone.

"Kelley was the last one over the prison wall," the defense counsel said. "As he jumped, he saw Oregon Jones wounded, and Guard Holman, dead. Jones had a shotgun. We will attempt to show that Jones, in falling, swung his gun around and whether intentionally or not, shot Holman."

When Kelley reached the ground according to the defense, Jones gave him the shotgun and told him to "play careful." Kelley took the gun, later hiding it in the woods near the Willard schoolhouse, where it was afterwards found by officers.

"We can prove without a doubt that neither Kelley or Willos fired a shot at anyone," King said. "The whole question is one of conspiracy. There was no premeditation, no deliberation, and no malice." The courtroom was crowded yesterday with many people standing in the outside corridor, unable to obtain admittance. Both convicts appeared in court unshaven. Kelley sat next to his attorney, conversing with him occasionally. Willos did not appear to be much concerned with either court procedure or the testimony of the witnesses.

VEGETABLE NAME IRKS GARDEN VARIETY OF COGNOMEN CHANGED BY COURT

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 19.—(By Associated Press.)—He was tired, he said, of having a name that his associates persisted in confusing with a well known garden vegetable, so he applied in superior court today for permission to take on the appellation "Charles Monro."

"What is the name you want to discard?" asked Judge Elliott Craig.

"Cucumbunga Avent." "I can guess the vegetable," agreed the court. "Petition granted."

DRAMATIC COMPANY HERE THIS EVENING

Forrest Taylor Players Will Present "Best People" at the Heilig

With its cast augmented and especially recruited with certain types of actors to portray certain characterizations, the Forrest Taylor Dramatic Stock company will appear in this city this evening at the Heilig theatre, with the organization intact as being presented to the theatergoers of Portland. Two notable additions have been made to the cast since Mr. Taylor opened his fall engagement at Portland, according to word received here. One of these is Mr. Cecil Drummond, a distinguished English actor, who has played in many Shakespearean parts and other important road shows. The other new member is Miss Effie Johnson, a young woman described as possessing much charm and unusual ability. These two, together with the rest of the cast, including Forrest Taylor and Miss Anne Berryman in the leading roles, are said to have given the Taylor company the distinction of being the best and most popular dramatic stock company ever presented in the northwest. The players are especially capable in comedy dramas the sort in which they have scored their most popular successes, and the sort they will present here when "The Best People" is offered at the Heilig theatre. Seats are going fast but there will be plenty of good ones left for those who are unable to get here early. Tonight's patronage will decide whether Salem is to be on the regular out-of-towns to be billed each week. The curtain will rise at 8:25.

PONY EXPRESS TO BE REVIVED HERE

Publicity Stunt in Connection With Movies Arranged for Saturday

The days of the Pony Express are to be revived! Saturday morning at 9 o'clock, two riders will leave the state house and will carry copies of the Morning Oregonian and the Oregon Statesman for 1861, to Portland. They will be started here by Governor Walter M. Pierce and will be received in Portland by Mayor George L. Baker. A relay of sixteen horses will be used. The event is being promoted by a Portland theater in exploitation of the picture "The Pony Express," portraying pioneer days. The picture will be shown here at the Oregon theater at a later date. The only incongruity in the event is that the ride will be over paved highways and that the riders will be accompanied by an escort of motorcycle police. Mounts will be changed at six places along the route, at Brooks, Hubbard, Aurora, Oregon City and at Milwaukeee.

Files of both the Statesman and the Oregonian for the year 1861 have been obtained and will be carried by the riders from here to Portland. They will be on display in the lobby of the Liberty theater there during all of next week. A telegram has been dispatched to Senator Stanfield, asking permission to carry a mail pouch also. It is requested is acceded to the occasion will be of historic interest.

Jay A. Haas, of the Paramount film company, was in Salem yesterday making arrangements for the ride. The idea is original with him and has never been carried out, he said.

HEILIG ELECTRIC SIGN BONE OF CONTENTION

and if the council would not act, he would sign the complaint personally. Mrs. John Carson of the Associated Charities, appeared before the council, and expressed the need of some place to house the association. She asked the council to help in furnishing two rooms, one to be used as an office, and the other as a room in which to store clothing, food, or whatever might be brought into the hands of the association for distribution among those in need. She stated that last year the association collected and spent in charities $1200, and that more would be needed this year. In as much as the matter was said to need immediate attention, it was referred to the committee on public buildings with power to act.

An amendment to the ordinance to license, tax, and regulate motor vehicles carrying passengers making the annual license $50 instead of $25 was the object of a brief discussion. Alderman Patton wished to lay the amendment on the table, giving as his reason that business is not especially good with those operating such vehicles. But Alderman Williams declared that taxi drivers and stage drivers

"don't need protection." The motion to lay the bill on the table was lost, and the amendment carried.

The following ordinances were passed dealing with streets: Ordinances assessing the actual cost of improving Winter between D and Market; Marion between Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth; the alley in block 38, Court between Eighteen and Mill Creek; Chemoleta between Twenty-first and Twenty-fourth, and the alley in block 89. An ordinance establishing the grade on Winter between Cross and Howard.

The Western Paper Converting company was granted a franchise with amendments for the construction of a railroad spur on its property. An amendment was passed increasing the capacity of gas tanks in the city to 1500 gallons. An ordinance was passed authorizing the issuance and sale of improvement bonds to the extent of $31,330.

Petitions were read for the establishing of street lights at the intersection of South and Maple Avenue, at the intersection of Jefferson and Church, and at the intersection of Fourteenth and A. They were referred to the committee on lights.

Petitions were read for pavement on McCoy between Hunt and Erison, and for pavement on Broadway between Norway and Madison.

New bills were read segregating the assessment cost of improving North Fifteenth between D and Nebraska avenue, and an amendment dealing with the salary of the sanitary plumbing inspector.

Bancroft & Bancroft were granted a petition to erect an electric sign.

W. H. Schafer, Romaine & Long, and Hugh Fletcher were granted soft drink licenses. The petition for the vacating of the alley in block 13 in the Myers addition was not granted.

LAW OBSERVANCE CROSSLEY'S PLEA

Portland Attorney Speaker for Chamber of Commerce Forum Luncheon

"We must consider law observance whether the laws suit some people or not, in private as well as public," declared James Crossley, Portland attorney who has entered the race for senatorship, in his address Monday at the weekly meeting of the Chamber of Commerce. "And if the people have passed the laws, it is also the duty of those in office to enforce them, whether they like them or not."

"There is a tendency these days to get away from the old standby principles of our forefathers," he continued. "The nation that gets too far away from religion is about to go on the rocks." Mr. Crossley believes that the federal government exercises control over a too great portion of the land in Oregon. He stated that at the present time the federal government controls 54 per cent of the land in Oregon, forest reserves, and he added that this "has a material and vital effect on our tax rates."

The federal government should give aid to the state of Oregon, Mr. Crossley asserted, because of the taxes the state has given to the government. He said that "the federal government is under obligation to help this state." He further added that there are billions of feet of fine timber being taken out of the state without bringing in any taxes to speak of. He advised, "don't go to Washington asking favor or alms. They are only paying back what they owe us."

He advocated the development of ports, not only the port of Portland but all the ports of the state. He declared that because "it is 3000 miles to Washington, they don't understand our situation. Consequently, we are subjected to the whims of the bureau."

MT. ANGEL TO BE HOST MARION COUNTY FEDERATION MEETS TONIGHT

The Marion County Community federation is to meet tonight at Mt. Angel. Robert Crawford is to be the principal speaker of the evening, and will punctuate his speech, which is to be on the subject of flax growing, with stereortican slides. At the meeting plans for the annual corn show to be held in the local armory November 19, 20 and 21 will be discussed. The clubs in the federation have all shown a remarkable enthusiasm in the corn show this year, and it is predicted by many that the show this year will far outdistance any held before in the county, both in attendance and in the quality of the exhibits.
