NEW COMEDY FILM BOASTS FINE CAST

"Zander the Great" With Marion Davies Is Now Showing at Heilig

With a cast that has positively never been duplicated on the screen and probably never will in the history of pictures, "Zander the Great," Marion Davies's latest Cosmopolitan production released through Metro-Goldwyn and now playing at the Heilig theater. Comedians predominate in the cast, and Miss Davies adds new laurels to her crown of versatility by appearing in a comedy role.

Also, it may added, that those who like a western drama will find their dreams realized in "Zonder the Great," for the far west rolls before them in all the glory and magnificence of high mountains and wide desert reaches.

The notable company includes: Hobart Bosworth, well known for is stage and screen roles, among he latter of which are "Down to he Sea in Ships," "The Silent vatcher," "The Last Man" and is earlier, but most celebrated characterization, "The Sea Wolf." Holbrook Blinn, whose "Bad Man," was the high light in the stage and screen world or 1923-24 and who, in "Yolanda" and "Janice Meredith" further distinguished himself by playing strong and fascinating characters.

Harry Myers, "The Connecticut Yankee," plays the role of "Texas," a comedy cowboy, and gives one of the funniest performances of his career, which was recently punctuated by his work in "Tarnish," "The Yankee Consul," and "Stepping Out."

Richard Carle and Harry Watson, Jr., are both stage stars, who appear in "Zander the Great." Mr. Carle is playing for the first time on the screen, while Mr. Watson has added his talents to several famous screen comedies bearing the Sennett and other brands.

Harrison Ford, the leading man, has played opposite Miss Davies in several of her recent pictures, and has achieved a reputation on the screen as the typical American lover.

George Siegmann, the heavy villain of scores of pictures, adds his talents to "Zander" in the role of Black Bart, a halfbreed bandit. Mr. Siegmann has also appeared in several Cosmopolitan productions including "Janice Meredith" and "Never the Twain Shall Meet" while his Danton of "Scaramouche" and his Bill Sikes of "Oliver Twist" will remain as unforgettable portraits of character acting.

Emily Fitzroy, who achieved fame as the boarding house keeper and gossip in "Way Down East," and who recently appeared in "Never the Twain Shall Meet," has the part of the austere and uncompromising matron of an orphanage in "Zander the Great."

Then there is Olin Howland. prominent in stage comedy roles, who appears in "Zander the Great." He also played in "Janice

Miss Nichols was born in Georgia some 30-odd years ago. She went to school in Philadelphia and traditionally ran away to go on the stage. There were years of struggle on the road, barn-storming, going out on one-night stands; also playing rough-riding western leads in the movies. Finally came the chance to help fix up a play that was weak in its comedy lines. Then came a vaudeville sketch-her first success.

Her other successes are "Just Married." "Linger Longer Letty, and "A Little Bit Old Fashioned. Miss Nichols is the head of her own production company and directs and writes her own plays. Although a thorough business woman, she still has time to bring up five-year-old son.
