

SALEM WILL PLAY HILLSBORO FRIDAY

Team Will Be in Good Shape for Contest; Three Schools Are Defeated

The Salem high school football aggregation will journey to Hillsboro Friday to meet the team of the high school of that city. Coach Huntington's boys will be in better shape for the game than they were last Friday, although E. Drager will not be able to pilot the team at quarter as he is still out with the smallpox. Lang, star full who has been out with an injured finger, is expected to be back in the game by that time and his services will be of great help to the team.

Olinger, who was knocked out in the Albany game last Friday, receiving a concussion of the brain is reported all right again and was back in school Monday. He will probably start at quarter. The local boys have won all of their three high school contests this year, having defeated West Linn, Astoria and Albany. The annual clash between Eugene and Salem will be a feature of the Armistice day program here.

but that the railroads are able to get along on only a 35 per cent increase because of the wholesale efficiency that has been introduced into the various systems. He does not claim that the railroads are perfect, declaring that "just as long as the rail roads are run by human beings, there will be some mistakes made."

It would be a mistake to reduce wages, he said, as it is through decently paid employes that the railroads are able to give the remarkable service they do. Mr. Flynn cited examples to show that the employes are responsible for services rendered. Speaking of this branch of the work, he asserted, "Acquaintance is the basis of service and service is the basis of business."

Declaring that Salem must "sell itself to the country," he said that "I never hear of people dying here because of the rain, but I do hear of them dying elsewhere from other causes." The lesson he drew was that Oregonians should not apologize for their rain, but take it for its face value and use it to advertising advantage.

One good way of advertising Salem, he said, is to give high class service to visitors, who become "walking advertisers for your city, the best class of advertisement in the world." He brought out that his company has spent close to a million dollars advertising the northwest, because if more people come west, and the towns prosper the railroads will naturally be benefited.
