EDITORIALS OF THE PEOPLE

The Holy Spirit Editor Statesman:

This is from a reader who is always interested in the Sunday sermons printed in The Statesman. I am a firm believer in the truths that are given us in the Bible. But I think we need to be careful not to make an idol of the Book, and careful to give the author of All Truth His rightful place today.

In the sermon printed October 30, Rev. R. L. Putnam makes the statement that the only source of information concerning the Holy Spirit is the Bible. I am wondering if he intended to have that word (only) in there. For if the Bible is the only source of information concerning the nature of the Holy Spirit, it would seem He (the Holy Spirit) is not exerting any influence in His present mode. Mr. Putnam admits that the Holy Spirit has its abode in the body of the Christian, and I presume he would admit that He did abide in the bodies of the writers of the Bible in their day. How could it be otherwise unless the human being of today is constitutionally different from humanity in their day?

Would a personality, who possesses the attributes of God, be so closely associated with the Christian and not give any information concerning himself? Is the book written by human instrumentality (written in a language so different from ours and subject to mistakes in translating) telling of the Holy Spirit's dealings with them in that day, any sarer information than His influence in personal presence with us today? INQUIRER.
