

FRED GRONER IS MORE ENTHUSIASTIC THAN EVER OVER THE WALNUT INDUSTRY

This is Saying Much, for Mr. Groner Has All Along Been One of the Optimistic Leaders of the Industry in This Section, and He Has One of the Finest Grafted Franquette Walnut Orchards in the World, and Grows Some of the Finest Nuts Produced Anywhere

Editor Statesman:

In regard to an article, I have not time to write much, but will say I am more enthusiastic over the walnut industry in the Willamette valley than ever.

feet square and am absolutely opposed to any kind of fillers. We are showing our faith by planting 1200 more trees this winter.

I believe in heavy thinning and a cover crop every year, followed by thorough cultivation. We had 44 per cent Jumbo size, this season, and only about 7 per cent medium.

train, etc. The wife of Senator Cameron of Arizona and her daughter joined us as we left Denver. She is a most delightful woman, but in leaving Chicago at noon Saturday our tickets assigned us to different cars.

We were surprised to find the foliage is very brilliant, but this year as there has been very little frost the colors aren't so beautiful.

We came on out to the Woodley. While we were gone the door to our apartment had been varnished by a stupid workman who filled the key hole of one of the locks with varnish. The janitor came at last, just then off went the lights so a candle was commanded, and after a long wait the door was opened.

Chapter G of the PEO sisterhood will meet this afternoon at the home of Mrs. G. W. Laffler. Rev. Martin Fereshethan will give a lecture on psychology as the program for the afternoon.

Musicals at Studio The home of Prof. and Mrs. T. S. Roberts was the scene last evening of a delightful private hearing of the new orthophonic vibrations, through the courtesy of Moore's Music House.

Masquerade Dance Saturday Brilliant among the affairs planned for the celebration of one of the year's most socially adaptable festive days was the Halloween masquerade dance of Saturday night in the Waldo Hills when Mrs. J. C. Currie entertained at the historic Hibbard farm.

Fidèles Guild The regular business meeting of the Fidèles guild was held November 3, with the president, Irene Gabbert, in the chair.

CHAPTER 143 WHY DICKY TOLD MADGE HE'D EXPLAIN IN THE MORNING

Working as quickly and deftly as I could, I prepared gauze and bandages and tied up Dicky's head, offering but one comment: "I think you should have a surgeon see that out."

"Nonsense. What more could a surgeon do? That dope you fixed up was great stuff. I cleansed the thing thoroughly, and you're a nifty hand with a bandage, if you are my own wife and I shouldn't brag about you."

In that instant I realized the attitude he meant to assume toward the accident. A hundred questions trembled on my tongue, but I uttered none of them. He would have to offer me some explanation of his coming home in so alarming a state, and I wished to hear one untrammelled by any query of mine.

"Well, Edwin will be along tomorrow night, or rather tonight"—I consulted my wrist watch a bit ostentatiously—"and if anything should develop, he can see to it."

Well I know that if Dicky stands in awe of anyone on earth it is his brother-in-law, Dr. Edwin Braithwaite, the famous surgeon, and his clear-eyed, keen-brained sister, Harriet, and I had the satisfaction of seeing him wince, even though ever so slightly, at the thrust.

Madge Scores. "That's the advantage of having a sawbones in the family," he agreed lightly, "but if it will relieve your anxiety any, I'll have Doc Williams look me over in the morning, early. There's no use troubling Edwin with anything so trivial, and I know you. By the time he got here, you'd have me running a temperature and on the verge of blood-poisoning."

I had scored, though the victory gave me little pleasure, for I saw that the last thing Dicky wished was to have his brother-in-law examine the wound on his head, and my suspicious wonder concerning the queer accident was augmented.

"I suppose I am foolish to worry about you"—I wondered if he caught the double meaning in my words—"but I would feel easier if you went to Doctor Williams in the morning."

"You can sleep soundly, then," Dicky answered, "for I'll call a taxi and beat it over there the first thing. Come to think of it, I'll have to visit him anyway, for I can't go around like this with a white bandage about my leonine brow, and I'm sure by tomorrow the doc can fix me up with some strips of adhesive tape over the gauze, so I can wear a hat."

His voice trailed off weakly, and he clutched at the basin as if to steady himself. I saw that his will-power would serve him no longer, and again I took hold of his arm, this time drawing it over my shoulder.

"You're a Good Nurse." "Don't be foolish, please," I pleaded. "You must get to bed at once. Lean on me, and I'll help you into your room."

He did not reject the aid I offered, but he stood irresolute for an instant and I saw the swift searching glance he sent toward the wastebasket which I always keep in the bathroom because our space in the other rooms is so limited. But I kept my own eyes carefully fixed in the opposite direction, and after a minute's indecision he gave a little sigh of acquiescence.

All the neighbors and friends are invited to be present at 2:30 p. m. Hayesville district is planning the organization of a junior council to be held in connection with the regular council of religious education to be held at Keiser school December 27.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. W. Cady, who were invited to dinner Friday evening at the home of Mrs. G. L. Cummings, were pleasantly surprised when upon arriving they were greeted by about 25 relatives and friends, who made a merry din with bells and various other jingle and ding songs of an old fashioned charivari, the occasion being their wedding anniversary. After congratulations were over a sumptuous dinner was served cafeteria style. The bride cut a daintily trimmed cake bearing the number of the anniversary, and the groom portioned a large walnut cake. The rooms were gaily festooned in autumn colored ribbons with an abundance of autumn flowers. The bride and groom were escorted to a position beneath a festooned doorway, where Mr. Wm. Siewert in a few "ill-chosen" words performed the wedding ceremony causing much laughter. The couple were recipients of a number of lovely gifts, and all joined in singing, "Blest Be the Tie That Binds," the song used in the original wedding service.

Why put up with an inferior watch—when you can conveniently buy a Gruen?

Nothing is so hurtful to our self-respect as constant resignation to things that are less than our desires.

If you have been long hoping to own a watch, in character comparable to the position you expect to attain, you should enjoy it now.

Under our new Divided Charge Account Service you will find it as convenient to buy a genuine Gruen as it would be to buy an inferior watch.

A part of the purchase price will deliver your Gruen tomorrow. The remainder may be divided into equal amounts, payable conveniently out of your monthly income.
