November 8, 1925 PRAISE THE GOOD GOD:—Make a joyful noise unto the Lord. Enter into his gates with thanksgiving. For the Lord is good. Psalm 100:1, 4, 5.

FATHER AND SON WEEK

The observance of this week is fraught with far-reaching possibilities. It is a period of time dedicated to special study of home relationships. It is a time for reflection, an occasion for resolves concerning the future of fathers and sons.

Wise and faithful devotion to the proper direction of his children is the father's sacred and imperative duty. And in response to his paternal efforts and sacrifices there should be genuine, respectful consideration.

The oft repeated admonition of the educational and social critics that the father should be companion to his boy is sound pedagogy and advice. This relationship affords pleasure and mutual understanding to be obtained in no other way.

The familiar motto "What is home without a mother" should be amended to include both parents who should be the ideals of the household which the father is primarily bound by the strongest ties of earth and Heaven to establish, maintain, protect and honor.

Social workers, sociologists and educators generally testify that boys of today are as good and as capable as were those of a decade or two ago. Juvenile courts declare that the wave of juvenile delinquency now on results in the majority of the cases brought before them, from delinquent parents, broken homes and absence of wise parental authority.

Independence to his maturer judgment, his position of responsibility and parental authority with which the father is clothed, the son should be respectful to his counsel which should be directive and not dictatorial.

The father's duty to recognize the old adage that "All work makes Jack a dull boy," to cultivate his boy's companionship, and to know of his other pals, is obvious. He who fails thus in his privileges and responsibilities deserves to reap the harvest of disrespect and regret which generally follows.

During this week the appeal to father and son for increased reciprocal devotion is emphasized. And every parent and son should strive earnestly to realize this ideal.
