FOR THOSE WHO MOURN
We grieve not for them but for ourselves. We miss them; life can never be the same without them. Nothing but time can heal the hurt and make the period of separation bearable. But when we come to see life in the whole, we rest in the certainty that we have only parted for a short time, that they are just over the borderline waiting for us to join them and continue the long pilgrimage in their company. —Sheba Hargreaves. n14
