ALL MAKE-UP UNDER BAN BY FILM ACTOR

Ramon Navarro, Star in "The Midshipman," Never to Use Paint Again

Ramon Navarro will never use make-up again!

The news of Jack Dempsey's downfall would be no more startling to followers of the sport page than this announcement will be to thousands of the motion picture star's followers all over the world.

It might seem that Navarro, at the height of his career and worshipped by screen fans everywhere is giving up his motion picture career. But it doesn't, and on the other hand may bring him even greater popularity than ever before.

For a long time Navarro, who will be seen as Ben Hur, has seriously considered doing away with make-up. Recently the opportunity was presented that made it possible for him to make the trial.

He was selected by the bureau of navigation to play the starring role in "The Midshipman," a story of the life at the United States naval academy, directed by Christy Cabanne for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, which is playing at the Hellig theater. As it was in accord with the nature of the production, in which hundreds of midshipmen will appear, Navarro believed that it was timely to put his idea to a test. Accordingly he went without make-up.

"After seeing the first prints of the production I was so delighted with the result that I have decided never to use make-up again. I have always been of the opinion that make-up robbed a man of his personality," Navarro averred. "Grease paint cannot help but tint a player's expression."

In making the decision Navarro realized how grave it was and of what importance it might mean to his future. Although it is not the first time that a screen actor has appeared without make-up, Navarro is the first star of great magnitude to make this decision.

'GRAUSTARK' NOW AT OREGON THEATRE

Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien Star in Picturesque Film Drama

Two of screenland's greatest favorites are coming to Salem today and in the same picture. They are Norma Talmadge and Eugene O'Brien, who play the leads in "Graustark," which opens at the Oregon theatre this afternoon and will remain on the screen there through Sunday and Monday.

"Graustark" is a modernized version of John Barr McCutcheon's great novel dealing with the mythical kingdom of that name in Southern Europe, a tale in which bejeweled and handsomely gowned beauties and richly uniformed officers and diplomats play and plot before a brilliant and picturesque background of colorful court life. There are few stories which lend themselves so readily to accurate interpretation on the screen.

Perhaps no story of love and adventure lends itself to pictorialization so successfully as this novel woven around a mythical kingdom, a fair princess and her American sweetheart, according to pre-view reports. Miss Talmadge in the ballroom spectacle in "Graustark" is said to be a commanding, lovable figure as the royal maiden who knew her own mind when it came to love and refused to be dictated to by the court plotters.

Directed by Dimitri Buchowetzki, the Russian director who has scored several outstanding successes since his arrival in this country, "Graustark" affords Eugene O'Brien an unsurpassed role as the young American. Marc McDermott shows his conspicuous abilities in the part of the conspiring prince. Roy D'Arcy, Albert Gran, Lillian Lawrence, Michael Vavitch, Frank Currier, Winter Hall and Wanda Hawley are among the other members of the able supporting cast.

To Hold Story Hour—Miss Constance Clark, a new member of the city library staff is planning to conduct story hours beginning this morning at 10 o'clock, and will be held each Saturday morning throughout the winter. Miss Clark is a graduate of Simmons college of Boston.

These girls prepared and served the meal all alone and the "proof of the pudding was in the eating of the pie," and these girls certainly reflected credit upon their teachers.
