ROWENA ASHER

My name is Rowena, little daughter of Dr. O. L. Asher of Turner, Oregon. I rode all the way from Southern Ohio in a little motor bassinet which was attached to the rear seat of a touring car. Although only eight months old then, enjoyed the trip very much, as I could sleep or sit up and play on very rough roads without any discomfort to myself or parents.

A WINTER'S EVENING

Bare trees against a sunset sky,
Make lacy fret-work of grey twigs against the flame,
Like faggots on a fire.
The chill of evening fills the crisping air;
Now spires and domes rise sharp against approaching night;
Lights blink in windows—blinds are drawn,
And paces quicken, as the crowds, gone for the day,
Near home and lighted fires.
