THINK OF THE HARVEST:—Whatever a man soweth, that shall he also reap. Galatians 6:7.

SENATOR STANFIELD IS RIGHT

Robert N. Stanfield, United States Senator, who is chairman of the public lands committee of the upper house of Congress, in addressing the Salem Chamber of Commerce at the noon luncheon yesterday, took up the matter of the great injustice to the eleven western public land states which is being done through the administration of the forest reserve lands by the Department of Agriculture—

And Senator Stanfield convinced most of his hearers that great injustices are being done—

For the public lands of right are the property of the states, and their administration by the federal government is in the nature of a trust arrangement. This was the doctrine of the fathers of our Republic. It is a trusteeship of the federal government for the good of the states.

But it is not working that way, in the case of the forest reserve lands—

In fact, it is working to the contrary. It is working an injury to the states. It is robbing the states. In the case of Oregon, nearly a fourth of all the taxable property of the state is withdrawn from taxation, as are all the improvements that may be put upon the land forever—

And there is taken for the benefit of the federal treasury about 65 per cent of all the money received for timber, for grazing, and for other uses.

This income, less reasonable costs of administration, ought all to come to the state; to all the public land states. It does not belong to the government. It certainly does not belong to the states which have been denuded of their timber; nor to those with great natural resources like coal and oil and iron, which states have contributed nothing and are contributing nothing to the cost of conservation—

And Senator Stanfield insists rightly that the eleven public land states ought not to be called upon to contribute all the funds for conservation, for the benefit of all the other states, and of the outside world having access to our markets.

What a magnificent fund for the public schools could be piled up in each of the public land states from the income from the forest reserves!

And surely it belongs to these states, and not to the whole country. The present system of exploitation of the property of the states for the benefit of the federal treasury has grown up without the intention on the part of any one of doing great injustices such as have followed—

And it is high time that a halt should be called.

Along the same line, a fearful injustice was done in Lincoln county during the World war. The government took over from the railroads about a third of the taxable property of Lincoln county, in timber lands, and built a great mill for the spruce division, to saw airplane lumber. The war stopped, and the government had the property on its hands. The officials of the War Department, in charge, made the best bargain possible. They sold the property on contract. The title remains in the government. The county cannot reach either the lands or the improvements made on the lands for taxable purposes. It was a shrewd deal of the War Department officials—

But it is tough on the taxpayers of Lincoln county, bonded and taxed to make improvements that benefit the value of these lands and the timber on them. It is not right. No more is it right to allow the forest reserve land funds to be absorbed by the federal treasury.

THE BULB EMBARGO

The embargo threatened against bulbs shipped into the United States from Holland and other countries abroad has been discussed much of late, both pro and con. There have been many outbursts of condemnation against thus closing the markets for foreign bulbs. This opposition is based upon the desire to obtain these goods, believed by some to be better than those produced at home, and in order to forestall the possibility of the home growers taking advantage of the embargo to raise the price of these products. Many of the growers, on the other hand, uphold the embargo.

The disease is caused by a narcissus fly laying eggs which develop into grubs that destroy the bulbs. Expensive machinery has been installed in Oregon and elsewhere over the country for the successful treatment of this pest. Relying upon the embargo which was announced many months ago, many bulb growers have made large investments in plantings in order to meet the future demands. Hundreds of thousands of dollars in Oregon alone have been thus invested in land, equipment and stock, relying upon building up a larger industry than will be possible if the proposed embargo does not become a reality. In fact if foreign nations with cheaper labor than is employed here are permitted to ship in bulbs with attendant disease which local growers must combat, losses must be sustained by the latter.

On the sixteenth of last month a meeting at which the proposed embargo was discussed was held under auspices of the United States Department of Agriculture at Washington. Representatives were present from the bulb-growing states, including Oregon, which vigorously demands favoring the embargo which was planned to go into effect about the first of the year.

Representatives, too, from the bulb importing firms protested against said embargo as ruinous to their business. The result of the meeting so far has been "under advisement." Just how long the public will wait for final decision is of course, problematical. Threats of retaliation by way of embargoes on American products and every other kind of pressure is always employed in such cases by those interested in importations as against home development.

Oregon and other growers are naturally and rightfully lined up in favor of the embargo.

NAME CHILD HEALTH CHAIRMAN AT MEET

Dr. Warner Reports 1,005 Salem Children Examined Since April

At a meeting of the Salem council for the Marion County Child Health demonstration, held last night at the Chamber of Commerce, Fred D. Thielsen was elected permanent chairman and C. E. Wilson, permanent secretary.

The Salem council for the health demonstration includes one representative from organizations and lodges in the city and will meet from time to time to confer with Dr. Walter H. Brown, director of the demonstration, and his staff.

Dr. Estella Frod Warner, director of medical service of the demonstration, said that since last April a total of 1095 children had been examined in Salem, of which 837 were over the age of six years and 173 under six years of age.

Dr. Warner also said that the full time of three nurses was now being given to the schools in Salem and that already much work had been done in nine of the school buildings in the city.

Miss Amelia Feary, assistant director of nursing service for the demonstration, said that in the city of Salem 1129 children had been given special service in nursing and that in 595 cases special work had been done in the homes of the children.

Three nurses, Miss Taylor, Miss Shackleton and Miss McNeill, are now giving all their time to work among school children. Miss Feary said, and also to visiting in the homes of children where the service requires special home attention.

The time of these nurses is taken up in preventing the spread of diseases among children. During the recent small pox epidemic, the work of the three nurses from the Marion County Child Health demonstration was of special value in assisting in caring for the children.

Miss Anne Simpson, director of health education, said that three weeks of her time each month was given to general health educational work in the county, and one week to Salem. Her work is talking health education to teachers and pupils throughout the county.

Fred D. Thielsen, president of the Salem council, will cooperate with other members of the council in the appointment of a number of special committees to work with the several departments of the Marion County Child Health demonstration.

SURVEY OF CHARITY WORK TO BE TAKEN

Committee Appointed to Help Portland Expert Cut Duplication

For a survey of charitable and social agencies in Salem, the Social Workers' association of Portland has loaned to the Chamber of Commerce the services of Miss Aleta Brownlee, who arrived in the city yesterday to take up the work.

The object of the survey is to acquire definite information as to the duplication of charitable work in the city and also as to what work is being done in the way of relief by the county court and the various agencies engaged in relief work.

Impression has prevailed that during the winter there has been duplication of charitable work and the report of Miss Brownlee, after the survey, will give definite information.

To have a committee to cooperate and give suggestions, the fol-
