THE ETERNAL MAN We know that the real man is indestructible, that he has an existence independent of the physical body, that the body is merely the instrument fashioned by some inscrutable law of being to serve as his means of earthly expression. We know that sooner or later it will be outgrown by the immortal man, when a gentle hand will loose it, allowing him to slip from it like a butterfly emerging from the chrysalis.

—Sheba Hargreaves. W. T. Rigdon & Son
