MANERUD, OREGON, WILL BE REFEREE

Bliss Oregon, Booked as Umpire; Cramer, OAC, Head Lineman

MEDFORD, Or., Dec. 4.—(Special to The Statesman.)—The local football squad, undefeated this season, at the end of a most strenuous period of training, is waiting tonight to size up the individual players and team ability of Salem's much touted eleven.

Advanced ticket sale indicates that perhaps the largest local turnout seen here in years will force their way onto the field before the whistle blows tomorrow afternoon.

Officials for the game which, according to local authorities, will settle the logical claim for high school championship in western Oregon, as follows: Manerud, Oregon, referee; Bliss, Oregon, umpire; Cramer, OAC, head linesman. One timer and one linesman to be selected by the coach of each team.

Adequate quarters for automobiles which will be admitted to Van Scoyoc field have been arranged. A small group of Salem high school rooters are expected to arrive tonight.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 4.—(By Associated Press.)—Permission has been granted the University of Alabama football team, 1925 southern conference champions, to play a Pacific coast eleven at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's day. The way was cleared for such a game by action of the southern conference in session here tonight when Coach W. W. Wade of Alabama asked a waiver on section 1 of the by-laws which prohibits playing of post season games by conference members.

Coach Wade stated that the authorities of the University of Alabama would consider acceptance of a challenge to play the game, but wanted the sanction of the conference before entering upon negotiations.

His back is injured, and he was taken to the hospital in Portland for treatment.

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

WHAT HAPPENED AFTER DICKY HELPED OUT UPSTAIRS

If there had been no other ground for my doubts of Dicky, my suspicions would have been aroused by his offer to help me with my preparations for dinner. There is nothing he hates quite so much as fussing around the house, and, if I have any especially arduous domestic task on hand I always give a heartfelt sigh of relief when he is safely out of the house. That he was voluntarily staying at home and proffering aid was a sure sign to me that, in the universal maternal phraseology, he had been "up to something." A desire to atone to me for something of which he supposed me to be in ignorance, or an attempt to avert my wrath—these were the interpretations I mentally put upon his offer.

But I flatter myself that there was no hint of my consoling thoughts in either my voice or my face when I answered him.

"There are so many things to do first, that it's hard to make a choice. However, I fancy I'll tackle Harriet's rooms first. Here," I thrust my packages into his hands. "I'll get some things I've planned to put up there, and we'll go directly up."

His face took on a gloomy, resigned expression.

"You're the original 'Do it now fiend, aren't you?' he grumbled. 'What's the awful rush, old dear? You have several hours yet.' 'And several dozen things to do in them," I retorted. "However,

I can get along by myself, if you'd rather stay here." Every wife knows the effectiveness of this weapon, if delivered in a tone which has no hint of rancor, but breathes sweet resignation. Dicky got to his feet with a reluctant grin which just escaped being a grimace.

"Where Do They Find 'em?"

"Oh, I'll toddle," he said. "I'm the 'Perfect Housewife's Delight' today, or the 'Housewife's Perfect Delight,' suit yourself as to the title. Ready? All right; let's go."

We ascended the stairs to the apartment duplicating ours on the next floor, which I had secured for Dicky's sister and her famous surgeon husband. Dicky gave it one searching, critical look and turned to me with a Gaelic shrug of his shoulders.

"Where do they find 'em?" he said. "I thought ours was bad, but this is the holy outside limit. Harriet will never put up with this."

I bit back the irritated retort that it was distinctly a Hobson's choice with his fastidious sister.

"Just wait," I said confidently. "It was what Mrs. Ticer would call the 'spittin' image' of ours, but I've drilled up things a bit downstairs as I'm going to do here. And Harriet's chief requisite is a clean, handy, isolated place where she can cook the dishes Edwin requires. That she will have here, and the beds are as comfortable as those of most hotels. Those are the only things that really matter."

A Startled Recognition.

"I trust Harriet shares your optimism," he said with an inflection that made my palms fairly itch for forcible contact with his ears. But when, with his aid, I had pulled the stiffly placed furniture around to more homelike angles, covered the scarred table with a colorful piece of Chinese embroidery, put a dainty white dresser-scarf over the bureau and some gay cushions upon the day-sop, fastened another piece of Oriental embroidery over the mantel and placed upon it the bowl of pink snapdragons and sweetpeas, with pasted-colored candles in cheap but effective candlesticks, on either side, Dicky gave a low, admiring whistle.

"Have to slip it you, old dear," he said heartily. "You've made it almost livable."

"Thank you," I answered absently, with my eyes sweeping the room. "But I have forgotten the book-ends. We can get along with the one set. Do you mind bringing those dozen Colonial figures from my desk, with perhaps four or five books you think they'd like? And ask Mr. Schwartz to bring up some kindling wood. I'd like to lay a fire in the grate, all ready to start when they come in. I'll see that the kitchen is in readiness for Harriet while you're gone."

"I fly," he answered and he was almost as good as his word, for he was back with the articles in an incredibly short time, closely followed by Mr. Schwartz with the kindling wood. And in another ten minutes we had locked the apartment door behind us, with the satisfying consciousness of a task well done.

Mrs. Marks' shrill voice came to our ears as we descended the stairs. She was standing just inside the half-opened halldoor bidding good-bye to Mollie Fawcett. At the sound of our footsteps the girl looked up and her eyes, startled, recognizing, looked into Dicky's.

By setting a limit to your wants and keeping them there, you get more out of life.

TINY GIRL'S PET IS SOLD

CHILD, WEeping, RUSHES OFF WHEN BIDDING OPENS

CHICAGO, Dec. 4.—(City Associated Press.)—A little girl 9 years old burst into tears, flung her arms around a pet calf that had just taken the highest prize at the international livestock exposition today, then rushed from the amphitheater sobbing as the animal went on the auction block. She was Pauline Brown of Aledo, Ill., and her Aberdeen-Angus calf won for her the title of champion junior stock feeder, the first time the award was ever made. The calf was bought by Eitel Bros., for the Chicago & Northwestern restaurants at 29 cents a pound, or $231, a record price.

The price paid for the calf was only one of the record smashing prices paid today as prize winners were auctioned off. The champion beef exhibited by W. W. Wilson & Sons of Muncie, Ind., brought $7 a pound and was purchased for the Hotel Sherman, Chicago.

The grand champion lamb on the hoof, owned by the University of California, sold for $456.50 and the senior yearling steer, shown by the University of Kentucky, brought $589.50. Trinity Ladies' Aid Elects, Christmas Seal Sale Progressing

SILVERTON, Ore., Dec. 5.—(Special.)—The Methodist choir members were entertained at a social evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Edson Comstock in the Waldo Hills Friday evening. The members spent a large part of the time in practice on their Christmas cantata which will be given at the Methodist church on December 13th. The reason for the cantata being given at so early a date is that members of the choir are going to California to spend the Christmas holidays. The Methodist Male quartet will also appear on a number of programs in the near future. The first of these will be held at the North Howell Grange on December 16th. Mrs. Edson Comstock is accompanist both for the choir and the quartet.

At the annual election of officers for the Trinity Ladies' Aid Society Mrs. O. Ormbrek was elected president with Mrs. Roy Sotum, vice president; Mrs. George Henriksen secretary, and Mrs. Hans Lovlien, treasurer.
