

NOTE ABOUT POOR TELLS OF SMILES

Visit Into One-Home Shows Work-Made Possible Through Stamp Sale

This letter is addressed to anyone interested in the poor man's burden, and who would wish to play the part of a real Samaritan:

"I will take you into a home I visited yesterday and you will see for yourself the smiles that met me when I called, from a mother in financial distress at present. Lying on a bed with a baby in a basket, both immaculate, mother beaming with gratefulness, for the care given her and her child by one of the city health nurses, provided for Salem by the Child Health Demonstration.

The Associated Charities could not induce such a smile, even the county court could not pay for the smile I saw.

It was brought by the human touch of a kindly nurse. On coming into the room I passed through the lower part of the house and up a narrow, dark stairway. It was clean, though dark, but so dark that one could scarcely picture it as a home.

When I reached the mother's door the scene changed. The room itself wasn't any better than the rest of the house. It was that mother's smile that changed all. That came from knowing that someone cared for a stranger. She has other children, besides the new baby, but the father is absent. He no longer is a member of that family through no fault of the mother.

And this is what I started to say. The little double-barred tuberculosis cross on a slender staff will bring this smile to every home such as this in Salem and Marion county if you will just give it a chance. It will bring smiles to the sick and lonely if

Fascisti Movement Gains Strength in England

England's attention is focused on growth of British Fascistic organization which, because of increasing number of disturbances caused by Reds, is becoming an important factor in public activities. Howard, member of parliament, is seen with young Fascists who are guarding him from possible Communist violence.

it has a chance. But reposing on a table in some store or booth it cannot perform. This is what it could do if you would buy it. What is this whole seal sale for anyway.

It will bring good fresh milk and some real food to some sick child languishing in a home where poverty is the chief asset and smiles are few.

Many little children in our county have tuberculosis and other wasting diseases. Then don't hesitate, for your conscience tells you to buy these, for the sake of one of these little ones. The Child Health Demonstration can give them the care, but through these seals we must furnish the health giving food and doctor's care." (Signed)

SALEM ELECTRIC CO. IN BANKRUPTCY

This Despite Fact That Assets Show Larger Than the Liabilities

E. S. Barton, for the Salem Electric company, last night entered a plea in bankruptcy. The assets are given at $23,000 and the liabilities at $22,000; but this includes the Barton residence, at Capitol and D streets, valued at $15,000, which would not likely bring that sum under a forced sale.

Mr. and Mrs. Barton came to Salem nearly 12 years ago, direct from New York City, where Mr. Barton had held important electric engineering positions. Mr. Barton went into business under the firm name of the Salem Electric company at once, in the Masonic building, which was new then, at State and High streets. They remained in the same location all the time.

Would Not Cooperate

There was a proposition brought up a few days ago, to settle the obligations at an agreed percentage on the dollar, and all Salem creditors consented to this, and one of them, the largest, agreed also to furnish additional money to carry on the business. But some of the outside creditors refused to cooperate, forcing the action taken last night. Not a single Salem creditor refused to cooperate.

Go to Portland

Mr. Barton has individually the contract for wiring the new YMCA building. He will complete this contract, after which the Bartons will probably leave Salem. He will likely enter into electric engineering work.

They will be missed in Salem, where they have many friends, and they will miss their Salem friends, among whom they have spent nearly 12 happy years.

NEWSBOYS HONESTY IS PRAISED IN TALK

E. P. Hopwood Tells Entertaining Stories on Newspaper Troubles

"We hire 250 boys in the city to carry our routes, trust them with the collection of $20,000 a month; we have not lost a cent in the last three years." This was the statement made by E. P. Hopwood, circulating manager of the Morning Oregonian of Portland, speaking before the Salem Rotarians at their luncheon Wednesday.

"Of course, the boys are all bonded. But we find they are trustworthy all the time. The average length of service of a carrier is 15 months. This means that less than every two years we must change our entire paper carrier personnel. We have about 700 applications for routes on hand all the time."

"Twenty-five per cent of the persons who call on Sunday morning saying they have been skipped by the paper boy are fooling us. However, we don't ask questions, but send the papers to them."

"Queer circumstances are involved in some of the misses. Dogs often carry away the papers from the porches. In one case a certain party was reporting his paper missing continually. The boy, who was an athlete, was sure he had not missed regularly. He watched to see the route. He found a policeman going home from his beat, was taking the paper along with him. He was a little stronger than the policeman, and led him to another officer to arrest him."

The Oregonian, with 103,000 daily and 155,000 Sunday, according to Mr. Hopwood, uses $1,000,000 worth of paper yearly. Other expenses of the circulation department amount to about $40,000 a month.

Because the government postal service rates have been raised, the Oregonian now sends practically all of its papers by trucks.

The mailing list is kept as small as possible. Other papers in the country are making the same practice, he said.

Formerly the street cars carried the papers to the boys on the routes. But the car men objected to the extra work, and gave inefficient service, he said. Now the Oregonian has 30 trucks in use for the sole purpose of getting papers to the routes.

If the Oregonian comes out five minutes late it loses a sale of 500 papers, Mr. Hopwood said. If it comes out 10 minutes late it loses a thousand. Consequently, an attempt is made to bring it out to the dot on schedule.

WILL HOLD SERVICE FOR MEN TOMORROW

"A Man's Work in a Man's Way", Will Be Evangelist's Sermon Topic

The attendance this week at the Stivers Evangelistic Meeting at the Court Street Christian church still shows a growing interest in the services. An interesting feature of their services is the great number of men that attend regular.

Friday night will be Men's Night. There will be a men's choir and the men will all be seated together. Ladies will do the ushering. Evangelist Stivers message to the men will be "A Man's Work in a Man's Way."

Wednesday night the evangelist spoke on "Pardon, Its Meaning and Evidence." He said, "a man may be converted and not be pardoned. Conversion takes place in the mind of the sinner and often times is only reformation. Pardon takes place with God. He has stipulated His terms of pardon and until one complies with His divine terms and fully obeys them, God does not pardon. The sinner must square his life with the New Testament terms of pardon." Tonight the theme will be "Shall We Know Our Loved Ones in Heaven?"

Tolstoy's Home and Works Will Be Given Recognition

TULA—Soviet Russia will recognize the attainments of Leo Tolstoy, the famous novelist and social reformer with the issue of a centenary edition of his works at the celebration September 10, 1928 of the writer's hundredth anniversary. The Tolstoy Museum in Moscow will be made a permanent edifice.

All the buildings at Yasnyaya Polyana, Tolstoy's home and birthplace near here, will be repaired and the village made over into something of a national shrine and educational center. Already a Tolstoy museum has been established there, the curator being Tolstoy's daughter, Alexandra.
