JUDGE COSHOW ON THE WORLD COURT

Leaders of Mankind Have Long Looked Forward to Such an Organization

The Six O'clock club of the First Methodist church of Salem had a large and appreciative audience at its meeting last night, to partake of the luncheon prepared by the ladies of the church, and to listen to Justice O. P. Coshov of the Oregon supreme court, who spoke on the World Court.

Judge Coshov said that for a thousand years the idea of an international court of justice had been in the minds of the leaders of mankind. The first proposal, a thousand years ago, naturally inferred that the Pope should be the supreme judge of such a court.

William Penn advocated such a tribunal. So did President Grant. In 1899 John Hay instructed the delegates of the United States to the first peace meeting at The Hague that they should work for such a court, and at the next meeting in 1907 Elihu Root gave America's delegates similar instructions, and at that meeting the international court of arbitration was authorized. Then came the Versailles conference, after the World war, resulting in the organization of the League of Nations, section 14 of which provides for the establishment of the World Court, consisting of 11 judges and five deputies, taken from the men of high legal ability among the nations of the world. The deputies act when the judges are unable to do so.

The United States, though not a member of the League of Nations, has a member of the World Court in the person of John Bassett Moore. The court is functioning, and has already made some most important decisions, preventing open hostilities; and the nations, such as Great Britain, France, Greece and others, have in each case cheerfully abided by the decisions of the court.

President McKinley favored a court of international justice; so did President Roosevelt; and that President Roosevelt favored and rat. Harding and Coolidge have favored or favor the World Court as it stands, with the United States a member of adhering to its practices.

Judge Coshov made out a wonderfully clear case in favor of the United States becoming a member of the World Court, and he was heartily applauded and thanked for his able presentation of the matter by a rising vote that was unanimous.

HEILIG THEATRE TO OFFER KOLB & DILL

Team of Famous Comedians Bring Wonderful Cast; Here Wednesday Only

Mail orders will now be received for seats at the performance of Kolb and Dill in "Pair o' Fools," their new musical comedy from the pens of John Emerson and Anita Loos, with music by Arthur Freed, which comes to the Heilig theatre on Wednesday, December 30, for an engagement of one night only. From the numerous telephone calls received at the Heilig since the first announcement that Kolb and Dill were booked to play here, it is believed that this year's engagement will shatter all prior box office records of this popular pair of comedians. Captivating orchestral interludes, charming voices, unusual dancing, gorgeous costumes, a faultless cast and novel scenic investiture are but some of the elements which have made "Pair o' Fools" the most pronounced success of Kolb and Dill in more than a decade. This year Kolb and Dill sought something just a bit different to any of their prior offerings, and it can be truthfully said that they were successful in their quest.

$25,000 GRANTED FOR DAC REPAIRS

Assessment Levied to Cover Damage to School's Science Buildings

The law enacted at the 1925 session of the legislature making it possible to levy an assessment against all state activities to cover fire losses and other emergencies suffered by the state, was invoked by the state board of control for the first time here yesterday in authorizing repairs to the science building at Oregon Agricultural college.

The board of regents of the college fixed the fire loss in the science building at $25,709, which was accepted by the state board of control. The board of control then authorized an appropriation of $25,000, which is the maximum amount allowed under the law.

The assessment necessary to cover the appropriation was levied against the various state activities based on the proportionate value of the plants to their aggregate value which was estimated at $15,228,294.

The board decided to have the repair work carried on under the direction of the building committee of the college. The amount of $700, which could not be appropriated by the board of control yesterday, will be authorized next July.

To this the Evangelistic company subscribed and took a share in the local financing association. These shares are subscribed for at the rate of $1 per share per month for 120 months. Five hundred of such shares under this plan will assure the erection and financing of the proposed new church building.
