Mrs. Franklin Publishes Stevenson Brochure

One of the most interesting small books on sale this season in the local book stores is Mrs. Viola Price Franklin's attractive booklet of 18 pages entitled "Stevenson in Monterey," or "An Afternoon With Jules Simonsau."

The brochure is dedicated to Mrs. Coolbrith, poet laureate of California.

"Many 'passionate pilgrims' there are who always have somewhere in the world a shrine endeared to them by the association, linked with the name of author, friend, a place cherished for its memories, and where they love to make pilgrimages. Such is dear

Old Monterey to every lover of Stevenson.

This being the introduction to the booklet, Mrs. Franklin continues to relate of an unforgettable pilgrimage to "this quaint old mission town" with its "large stone-walled house in which Stevenson found a home," and more especially of her conversations with Jules Simonsau, who had known Stevenson both intimately and eagerly.

The entire booklet is written in an intimate, understanding style, and brims with the appreciation of a real devotee of the great author.

Mrs. Franklin is assistant librarian at Willamette university. She is a member of the Salem

Writers' club and is an officer in the Northwest Poetry society.

Class Sponsors Party
The class of high school girls at the First Presbyterian church of which Miss Gladys Bartholomew is the teacher, sponsored an unusually delightful party Saturday afternoon in the church parlors when they entertained for more than 50 little children of the poor throughout the city. Through the courtesy of the business men the genial Santa Claus, who frequents the streets these days, was an additional guest, and distributed toys, nuts and candy to the group.

Miss Bartholomew's class has been instrumental in securing a large number of toys for distribution this Christmas. Part of these the class turned over to the Elks and part to the Associated Charities.
