FILIPINO HOLIDAY CELEBRATION GAY

Memory of Jose Rizal, 'Father of His Country', Fittingly Marked

Filipino boys of Salem observed the 29th anniversary of the death of Jose Rizal, the great Filipino who is to his country as George Washington is to America, at Waller hall Tuesday evening with a varied program. A full house responded to the invitation of the local boys to observe Rizal Day with them.

Filipino string orchestra was received enthusiastically by the audience. Emilio Bonsilau, proclaimed by his compatriots as one of the best guitar players of his race, was called upon for two encores after he had played his regular numbers.

Even as a house divided against itself cannot stand, a nation divided against itself cannot stand, so can a world divided against itself cannot stand," was the declaration made by Marcus Berbano, in speaking of Filipino-American relations.

Mr. Berbano advocated the laying aside of race prejudice in order that the world may become united. He declared that the Filipinos who are educated have a love that will never die for the United States, who have shown them the way to education.

Dr. Carl Gregg Doney, president of Willamette university, spoke concerning the life of Rizal, declaring that the history of that Filipino is the most amazing biography he has read.

There are 2000 islands in the Philippine group, Dr. Doney informed the audience. These range from mere rocks jutting from the ocean to islands half the size of Oregon. The group extends 2000 miles in length.

A variety of products are grown on the islands that can scarcely be equalled elsewhere. The climate is ideal. The group was discovered by a Spanish explorer in 1521 and claimed by Spain. "Isn't it strange," said Dr. Doney, "that when one man sailing forth in a ship discovers a country, he claims it for the country from which he comes? The country suddenly makes the discovery of the land. Just as if the natives have not already discovered it themselves."

At the age of three Rizal was able to read and write his own language. At five he had mastered a foreign language. At six he was a sculptor, with work so good that it won a gold medal at the international fair held in St. Louis. At seven he wrote his first drama.

When he reached the age of 15, he won his Bachelor of Arts degree, capturing all the honors of his class, in spite of the fact that he was in school with Spanish students of Manila who looked down upon him as native trash. At 18 he won the prize for the best poem composed by any Filipino in the world.

At an early age he resolved to fight for the freedom of his country from Spanish rule. When he went to the university and found his brain was as capable as those of Spaniards, he saw that his way to freedom for his fellow men was through education.

He journeyed to Madrid, where he became an eye specialist so that he could save the eye sight of his mother, who had been mistreated by the Spaniards. He was musician, artist, sculptor, novelist, poet, archeologist, physician, engineer and linguist. He did not merely dabble in these fields, but was recognized as an authority in each.

His novels helped to educate the people against suppression in

LICQUOR IS SEIZED

NEW YORK, Dec. 29.—(AP)—A million dollars worth (bootleggers' prices) of high grade liquor was seized today by prohibition agents.

Pendleton—Oregon wool growers meet here January 21-23 for annual session.

But Spaniards, seeing his influence on his people, trumped up a charge, and executed him for an insurrection in which he had no part. He was executed at the age of thirty-five.

Filipinos hold that his influence has done more than anything else to breed into the hearts of them a longing for the freedom of their country.

Following was the evening's program:
Overture—Filipino String Orchestra.

Invocation—Rev. F. C. Taylor.
Introductory Remarks—Simeon Flores.

String Selections—Filipino Orchestra.
Life of Dr. Jose Rizal—Antonio Delfinado.

"My Last Farewell" by Rizal—Felix Ramos.
Vocal Solo—Miss Gladys McIntyre.

Filipino-American Relation—Marcus P. Berbano.
Guitar Solo—Emilio Bonsilau.
Address—Dr. C. G. Doney.
Philippine National Anthem and Star Spangled Banner—Filipino String Orchestra.
