Bits For Breakfast
Going very fast—
Extra copies of The Statesman Annual.
Many more than usual were printed, but they will be all gone soon, the way they are going.
They are telling to a larger audience than ever about the advantages of this land of diversity, country of opportunity, and place of welcome.

Going to be a boom, one of these days, in the Santiam mining region—and Salem will wake up and find she has a live and growing mining camp at her front door. Sure as you were born. And it may be very soon.

The Marion county grand jury reports the belief that the state flax plant ought to make a profit from now on. It certainly should. With the other industries, it is on the way towards making the institution self supporting. Given $100,000 worth of new equipment, and good management, the institution would be self supporting in a very little while. By just keeping on keeping on, under the revolving fund law, also with good management, it will in the course of time earn the money to buy its own equipment, to make itself self supporting.

We Change Our Minds
About people when we come to know them better.
About jobs when we see how the other man works.
About policies when our party gets into power.
About children when we have some of our own.
About education when we fall for lack of preparation.
About religion when we get into trouble and have no God.
About business after we have invested in some stock.
About contributing to charity when we need help.—Kalamazoo Kiwanis Goat.

A few investigate, a few snoop, but the big majority put in their time merely butting in.

Any experience that keeps you awake nights is worth all it costs.

TRIBUTE TO LIFE OF MANLY R. MOORE

He Saw Oregon Grow From Pioneer Times; He Built the First Rock Road

Manly R. Moore was born at Wauwatosa, Wis., Nov. 14, 1847. Married in Salem, Oregon, June 2, 1872. Died at Salem, Oregon, Dec. 21, 1925, at the home of his son, Crawford Moore.

Christopher Moore, father of Manly R. Moore, came from Toronto, Canada, by the way of the Great Lakes to Wisconsin in 1846 and settled with his family in Wauwatosa, a small village just north of Milwaukee, and Manly R. Moore, the youngest of the family of eight children was born the following year.

In the spring of 1852, becoming enthused after reading of the wonderful Oregon country, the father with his family, joined one of the many emigrant trains bound westward, and set out for Oregon. It was a hard, tedious journey. A large proportion of the wagons of emigrant trains were drawn by oxen and those whose wagons were drawn by horses could go no farther each day than the balance of the train, as they must stay together for protection against the Indians.

The family reached The Dalles during the last days of October. Three days before this, the family flour gave out on account of having divided rations with the ox team in order to sustain their vitality to the journey's end.

The last morning out from The Dalles the mother walked ahead of the train, and the little boy
