

Sportsmen Disagree on Fishing In Mill, Battle and Beaver Creeks

ROD AND GUN CLUB FAVOR PROTECTION

Salem Anglers Club Will Meet Monday Night to Express Attitude

Whether or not Mill creek should be closed to anglers for a number of years is the question upon which local sportsmen are centering attention at the present time. Salem Rod and Gun club recently went on record, it is understood, as being in favor of closing Mill creek along with Battle creek and Beaver creek for a period of two years or so in order that the streams might be restocked.

But certain other local sportsmen have taken the view that closing of the stream is unnecessary. These have organized, or are in the process of organizing the Salem Anglers club.

That the Anglers club is more or less opposed to the policies of the Rod and Gun club in regard to closing streams was the general opinion of the members of the latter when they met last night at the chamber of commerce building.

Members of the Salem Rod and Gun club expressed the opinion that the two clubs should cooperate. If the Anglers club really want to work for the best interests of the sport, say the Rod and Gun club members, they have an open invitation to attend the meetings of the Rod and Gun club, and to express their views. Clifford Parker is in the rather precarious position of being a member of the Rod and Gun club, and treasurer of the newly organized Anglers club.

When called upon at the meeting last night to explain his action in joining the new organization, which was looked upon as a club composed of members who seem to have fallen out with the Rod and Gun club, Parker asserted:

"As yet I know nothing of this new club. The first thing I heard about it was when I was called on the phone and told I had been elected as treasurer of the club. I told them I would accept on one condition; that I attend their meeting first, find out just what they are, and satisfy myself that they are all right. I do not care to commit myself yet, for I do not know a thing about the club."

The Rod and Gun club by unanimous vote decided to enter the Oregonian Telegraphic shoot to start February 7. Every club shoots on its home grounds and

SHIFTING DEFENSE WILL BE PUZZLING

Hard Play Seen in Drive to Keep Victory Home, Five Practice Fast

Salem high school basketball men are enjoying a week-end rest preparatory to their game Monday night with Ashland high school. The game is to be played on the gym floor of the Salem high school and will start at 7:30 o'clock sharp.

Coach Huntington has been working his men in an endeavor to whip up the team's work for Monday night that will be necessary if the victory is to remain here in Salem instead of gallivanting down to Ashland on the S. P. train.

Every man on the team is reported to be in good shape. A fast combination has been found in Siegmund and Duffy at forwards. Nash and Duffy make up a fast combination, Nash also being exceptionally capable of working with J. Drager, center.

Siegmund is the most recent discovery of Coach Huntington. Up to the time of the last game, that with Woodburn, Siegmund did not even help warm the bench. He was sent in to start in the Woodburn game, and before he had registered 10 points, more than any other man in the game had tallied up to that time.

Style of defense Salem will use against Ashland will be something of a five mixed with a man-to-man play. Part of the time the locals guard certain men, and part of the time work as a unit. This style has proved puzzling to most of the teams Salem has met this year.

Coach Huntington will start the following for Salem in the Ashland tilt tomorrow evening: Duffy and Nash at forwards; J. Drager at center, and R. Drager and Olinger at guard. Siegmund may start at forward instead of Nash.

phones in or telegraphs in the results of the shoot to the Oregonian, which is sponsoring the shoot.

The club must shoot every Sunday, for as many Sundays as is necessary to meet every other club entered into the shoot, which is an all state event.

It is thought the contest will run well into the summer before a team will have shot with all the others entered. The three high men each Sunday are reported. The first 25 targets are the ones that count.

Final elimination is to be shot in Portland after the teams throughout the state have met each other. Out of all the teams in the state ten men will be picked for the final shoot.

George Palmer was appointed to serve as a committee of one to go to Corvallis today to meet with committees from that city and from Eugene. The purpose shoot being planned.

Salem's representative will carry to Corvallis the authority to suggest to the other two committees that, in addition to the $50 trophy to go to the club with the winning team, each of the three clubs be assessed a certain amount of money so individual trophies can be purchased for each of the ten men and the two alternates on the winning team.

Another question was whether or not yearly dues should be charged to all members. One faction held that there is enough money in the treasury, the club is prospering, and the money is not needed.

The other faction held that the dues should be charged as a matter of principle, that the club would better be able to keep track of its members if yearly dues were levied.

It was moved and seconded that $1 a year be charged each member as dues. The motion, however, lost by a decisive majority.

The objectives of the Salem Anglers club will be ascertained. It is thought, when the club holds its first meeting at the chamber of commerce rooms Monday night.
