Rev. Crowder to Stay—
Rev. U. S. Crowder is back at his home in Salem, with his wife and daughter, at 1083 Shipping street. He has finished his engagement as pastor of the Methodist church at Manville, Wyoming. Salem is Rev. Crowder's home, and has been for three years, and he proposes to stay here for good and aye. When he left Manville, Wyoming, a week ago last Monday, he left ten feet of snow in the streets there. He brought some photographs to prove it. He fell in love with Salem a long time ago, and he thinks it has a brighter future than he thought it had the first time he saw this city.

Water Project Urged—
Financing and construction of the Jefferson Water Conservancy district, formerly the north unit of the Deschutes project, by the federal government, was urged in a resolution adopted here yesterday by the members of the state irrigation and securities commission. Copies of the resolution have been sent to members of Oregon's delegation in congress and officials of the federal reclamation service. The resolution set out that approximately 80 per cent of the lands in the project are now in cultivation, but are not producing profitable crops because of the lack of sufficient moisture during the growing season.

SOME SUNDAY SERMONS FROM SALEM PULPITS

"NOW IS THE ACCEPTED TIME"—2 Cor. 6:2
By DR. N. K. TULLY
First Presbyterian Church
There is no past; there is no future; we live in the eternal now. If anything is to be done, we must do it in the present. Nothing is accomplished by putting it off. A man's greatest achievement is to repeat of his evil ways and come into right relationship with God. Repentance is a voluntary act of the individual, resulting in a new mind, a new heart, and a new life attitude. The command of God is direct and peremptory to all men that they should repent. In view of revelation and enlightenment, the obligation of repentance is universal.
Delay always increases difficulty. Convictions not acted on die. Truths not followed fade. Impressions resisted are harder to make again. A response refused renders the will less able to make it a second time. The habit of lingering grows with indulgence. The longer a man puts off the important business of turning his back on the world and his face toward the Lord the less likely he is ever to make the turn. Delay is dangerous, in nothing more so than this.

It should solemnize us to know that the Holy Spirit, whose work it is to apply a saving knowledge of Christ to men, may abandon us because of our lack of response. He has too much to do always to use it.

FLU CONTAGIOUS
PHYSICIANS WARN
Real Danger Lies in Complications, Says State Board of Health

Warning against influenza was sent out yesterday by the Oregon State Board of Health, in an article detailing the extreme contagious quality of the disease. The warning reads:

While it is not cause for serious alarm there is an increasing number of cases of influenza being reported from all parts of the state. Influenza in a mild form is constantly present. The real world-wide epidemics have usually been preceded by a number of smaller epidemics which passed unnoticed.

Influenza has been hailed by successive generations as a new disease. It is, however, an old disease, and epidemics are recorded as early as 1500 A. D.

Influenza is an acute, extremely contagious disease resembling a severe cold, with fever, pain in the head, eyes, ears or muscles. It comes on suddenly and the severity increases in a matter of hours. The disease is extremely infectious. It is transmitted by saliva and mucus thrown out by coughing, spitting and sneezing, and can probably be indirectly transmitted by contact with eating utensils and perhaps, to some extent, by dust. The causative agent of influenza is not known.

Susceptibility seems to be universal and the disease spreads through communities with speed and ease which indicates that there is very little natural resistance in the normal individual. The real menace of influenza is due to its complications, because it lowers the patient's resistance, especially his resistance to respiratory infections and thus makes him an easy prey to pneumonia.

The common cold should be regarded as a serious matter. The prevention of influenza is largely a personal matter. Effective measures depend on the voluntary submission of the habits of the individual to the public good.

Everyone should realize the serious nature of a "cold." A cold may be almost anything from a trivial "cold in the head" to pneumonia. The infection may vary from the very mild to the most virulent known to medical science.

W. M. Smith, assistant state superintendent of public instruction, left here recently for Washington where he will attend a meeting of the National Educational association.

Every one therefore that hears these words of mine, and does them, shall be likened unto a wise man, who built his house upon the rock; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not; for it was founded upon the rock. And every one that heareth these words of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, who built his house upon the sand; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and smote upon the house; and it fell: and great was the fall thereof.

The words quoted were those used by Jesus in His closing appeal to the Sermon on the Mount. One word stands out above all the others in this story and that is the little word "do." Jesus considered that the truth He spoke must be completed in action. Truth is utterly worthless to anyone unless it is expressed in daily life. So Jesus declares that unless "these words of mine"—the Truth, finds expression in the daily life of His hearers they will be for naught and the hearer will be helpless when life's testing time comes. Such a hearer will be as a house built on the sand in facing a terrific storm.

Jesus' words and teachings are the true basis of all right human action. Hence the great contrast He draws between the hearer only and the doer of His truth. The hearer only hears all right, but he substitutes something else for the truth he hears. He builds on a sand foundation because he substitutes such things as talk for deeds; admiration for divine truth for action; discussion of truth for doing it, or simply being a well wisher of Christianity.
