

FEVER PREVALENCE SAID INCREASING

Oregon Board of Health Issues Statement Concerning Typhoid

Typhoid fever has shown an apparent increase in prevalence in 1925. Typhoid fever is too common in the state of Oregon and active measures are necessary for its prevention.

Much disease would be prevented if physicians would report to health authorities all cases of indefinite illness among food handlers as in families of grocers, dairymen, candy and ice cream makers, particularly if symptoms point toward intestinal or lung involvement.

Persons who sell foods or who prepare or handle foods for sale should realize that if there is any diseased person in their employ, their customers are apt to learn of it and such careless disregard of public protection will eventually damage or destroy their business.

Persons who sell foods exposed to infection make themselves liable to prosecution. Every community should take active control over its milk supply.

Swimming in polluted water accounted for a number of cases of typhoid. The water of all swimming pools should be sterilized during its recreation.

Campers sometimes contract typhoid infection from the water or food supplies. The well or spring may be contaminated. Most streams are polluted. The only safety lies in boiling or chemical disinfection before using.

Persons who contemplate camping should become immunized against typhoid as an added precaution. Thoughtlessness has resulted in many cases of typhoid fever. Contact infection in typhoid families causes many cases. The family of a typhoid patient should remember that the patient, his hands, bedding and eating utensils are constantly infected with typhoid germs, and that without constant and extreme care the infection will be transmitted.

No matter how careful she may be the patient's nurse should not cook or handle foods for other persons. The careless disposal of the body discharges from typhoid cases maintains the high development rate of typhoid cases. Both the kidney and intestinal discharges should be sterilized from the beginning of the illness. Typhoid vaccine will prevent typhoid fever but not after the person is already infected. Immunization against typhoid is highly recommended.

Typhoid fever is almost unknown in the army, and would be in our communities if everyone was protected against this disease. Every case of typhoid is caused by the carelessness or failure of some individual to observe the rules of common decency or cleanliness. The annual toll from typhoid in Oregon is too large and only by taking active preventive measures can we eradicate the disease.

WOULD CHECK NATION'S CRIME WAVE

Can America's crime wave be checked by some new plan of action as yet undiscovered? While hundreds of plans are being preached by reformers who believe police and courts have lost control of the situation, National Crime Commission is beginning a comprehensive study of the subject which may result in the adoption of new methods of handling criminals. Photo shows the newly organized body in session in New York. Seated (L. to R.) F. Trubee Davison, New York legislator; Hugh Frazer, N. Y. labor leader; Richard Washburn Child, author; Mrs. Richard Derby, daughter of the late Theodore Roosevelt; Charles Evans Hughes, ex-secretary of state. Standing (L. to R.) Newton D. GOVERNOR FAVORS SMOOT PROPOSAL

Bill Would Prohibit Federal Government's Claim to State Minerals

Governor Pierce, in response to letters received recently, yesterday advised Representative Smoot of Eastern Oregon, that he favors the Smoot bill which would make it impossible after certain periods for the government to disturb the state's title to public lands because of their mineral deposits. The bill refers particularly to lands designated in or selected under grants to the states.

A copy of the bill received by the governor was referred to the attorney general for interpretation. The attorney general held that the passage of the bill would result beneficially to Oregon and other western states.

The bill was introduced, it was said, because the supreme court of the United States in the case of the government vs. Sweet held that there is no time limit in which the United States may assert its claim to lands which have passed to the state or to its grantees where the lands were known to contain mineral deposits at the time they were acquired by the state under the grant, and that this applies to a grant in which no specific reservation of mineral lands is expressly made.

BANDIT SUSPECTS HEARING TUESDAY

Three Held for Scotts Mills Bank Robbery Are Returned to Salem

John and Norman Moore and Emil Knorr who were arrested recently at Sacramento, Calif., charged with being implicated in the attempted robbery of the Scotts Mills bank on December 24, were returned here yesterday by Deputy Sheriff Sam Burkhardt and Lyle Page, deputy district attorney.

Knorr and Norman Moore were said to have admitted that they were responsible for the attempted robbery. John Moore told the officers that he was in Portland at the time the crime was committed. The officers branded this statement as false, however, and said they had conclusive evidence that John Moore participated in the holdup.

While enroute north from Sacramento Knorr attempted to remove the handcuff from his wrist, but was prevented from carrying out his plan to escape.

The prisoners probably will be arraigned in the justice court here next Tuesday.

Eugene—Ford-Nelson Mill company will build $5,000 tile and concrete building.

BEE ASSOCIATION WILL BE FORMED

Would Cooperate With Polk Group to Compel Enforcement of Bee Laws

Every owner of one or more bee hives in Marion county is violating the law and laying himself subject to a fine of from $10 to $100. This is according to the general laws of Oregon, chapter 162, enacted by the 1923 legislature.

Efforts are being made by the Salem Chamber of Commerce to get together bee owners in Marion county for the purpose of organizing an Association, and also for cooperating with the Polk county bee association to compel the enforcement of laws regarding bees, now on the statute books of Oregon.

The Chamber of Commerce has written Prof. H. A. Scullen, assistant professor of Entomology of the Oregon Agricultural college, asking when he can come to Salem to meet those who are interested in bees.

According to the law passed by the 1923 legislature, it is the duty of the county court to appoint a bee inspector upon petition of seven persons who are actually engaged in the culture of honey. The law also plainly states that the compensation of the bee inspector shall be determined by the court.

Every person in Oregon who has one or more bee hives or colonies of bees, or controls or possesses bee hives, is obliged by law to register the same in the office of the county clerk and obtain a license. The law plainly says "shall" and not the uncertain word "may."

This same Oregon law provides that every person owning bees or in possession, shall secure a license and pay for the same $1. This is not optional. The law says "shall." Negligence to secure this license lays one open to a misdemeanor, according to the same law, and this is punishable by a fine of from $10 to $100.

Although there is no record in the county assessor's office of those owning or possessing bees, the Oregon law of 1923 plainly provides that every county assessor or shall require any person leasing, owning or operating any colony of bees, to furnish the assessor with a list, stating the number of colonies, and also information as to where the bees are kept in the county.

A meeting will be called as soon as the Chamber of Commerce can hear from Prof. Scullen, for a discussion of ways and means whereby bee laws now on the statutes, may be enforced.

As the county court is required by law to appoint a bee inspector upon the written petition of seven persons actively engaged in the culture of honey, this will probably be the first step in enforcing the law.

The second step, as soon as the Marion county Bee keepers association elects its permanent officers, will be in asking for the enforcement of the law requiring all owners of bees to register and secure a license from the county clerk.
