Removal of the state lime plant from Gold Hill to Salem, to be operated as an industry at the Oregon State Penitentiary, was proposed by members of the state lime board at a meeting held here. It is estimated that cost of lime to the farmer could be cut from $5.00 to $4.00 a ton, by the change. Investigations are being made.

First annual window display week has enlisted the support of more than forty merchants. Extra traffic officers will be employed to aid in handling crowds expected for the occasion. A seven piece orchestra will be engaged for the dance on the opening evening.

Friday, February 26. Property bwners will be asked to vote $40,000 for school purposes at the special election which has been called for March 29, in keeping with the vote of school board members. Of this amount $30,000 will be for the readjustment of the salary schedule for Salem teachers. The other $10,000 will be used for maintenance and repairs, material and supplies, insurance and interest on warrants, if granted by the people. The schedule is the lower of two presented for consideration by Superintendent George Hug.

If Salem would wake up and fully realize the possibilities of mining development at her front door, in the Santiam country, her greatest city building possibility would be soon realized, in the opinion of T. S. Waltemeyer, of Seattle, electrolytic copper extraction expert. He was in Salem some time ago, when he looked over the Santiam mining region rather thoroughly. He became convinced that under the mountains of the high Cascades there is the possible making of one of the richest and greatest mining camps in the United

Definite decision to remove the state lime plant from Gold Hill to Salem for operation as a state penitentiary industry, was reached at a conference attended by Governor Pierce and prison officials. John Quinland, chief engineer, of the prison, left at once for Gold Hill to make arrangements.
