tax burden of the farmer can be relieved and pledges himself to work for that end. Also he would provide a market for the farmers' surplus produce. Taxes would be reduced by reducing the cost of government. Besides, he would have stricter immigration laws, stricter observance and enforcement of the prohibition laws, federal aid for the Oregon harbors, legislation to encourage and sustain an American merchant marine, and reorganization of the administrative departments to do away with duplication.

Robert N. Stanfield also declares himself heartily in favor of the prohibition enforcement and observance. He points out that he has already attained several important committee appointments in the senate, and therefore, should be retained as the senator from Oregon. Revenue derived from the public lands in Oregon he would have paid back to the state. He heartily endorses reclamation and irrigation legislation.

his measure which would authorize W. D. Comer, of Seattle, and Wesley Vandercreek, of Longview, to construct and operate the toll bridge. Representative Miller, republican, Washington, read a message from the Seattle chamber of commerce endorsing the project, after which several witnesses presented a protest by Portland interests against the proposal.

Both sides of controversy agreed on the necessity for guaranteeing unrestricted commerce, the battle revolving itself in another of its many phases, the relative importance of a connecting link in a national highway system and free water traffic and whether it was necessary for full operation of either side to restrict the other side.

Warren L. Lewis, of Seattle, stressed the need of the bridge to keep pace with highway development. He hinted that fear of some Portland interests that Longview and Kelso might develop as a rival port, and that highway travel from Puget Sound to California might be diverted over the Roosevelt highway, now nearing completion, might be back of Portland's opposition.

Representative Johnson read telegrams from civic leaders and organizations in Oregon and Washington showing, he said that public opinion is widely divided.

Everybody Has a Double With Blood Resemblance

If You Resemble a Great Man, You Are Blood Kin, Says Dutch Professor, Thirty Generations Provide for 1,000,000 Descendants

Everyone has at least one double somewhere in the world, and doubles are always blood relatives, though they may be extremely distant ones. These recently announced theories of Professor Beemmel of Gronigen university, Holland, are attracting wide attention in Europe.

In every case of striking physical similarity studied by the professor, says the April Popular Science Monthly, a common ancestry was proved. Accordingly, says Dr. Van Beemmel, if you resemble closely one of the world's great men, you can properly claim blood relationship. He points out, however, that this is not strange since if one goes back eight generations a man has 256 ancestors, and in thirty generations, 1,000,000 forebears.

There are a number of striking instances where men in ordinary walks of life closely resemble famous men in physical appearance. Judge Charles Bull, of Reno, Nevada, is a "second Lincoln" in looks, height and weight. He is six feet four inches tall, weighs 185 pounds, and his features are splendid work she is bound to occupy an enviable position when the prizes are being awarded. Russell Maw has appeared in the role of a modern "Robin Hood," with the famous bow and arrow. He has been practicing archery in his spare moments, and has now become quite expert in this line. He can shoot an arrow with accuracy fifty yards. He has in mind after the contest closes to organize an archery club. Russell has a lot of good friends, and will undoubtedly be a serious contender at the close of the contest if he can continue to apply himself energetically until that time.

Representative Miller, republican, Washington, read a message from the Seattle Chamber of Commerce favoring the Johnson bill. Portland is almost unanimous against the Johnson bill, Representative Crumpacker said, but will not oppose a project for a bridge under different conditions.

F. M. Warren, president of the Port of Portland, said the city of Portland, which is dependent almost wholly on its harbor commerce for its commercial position will oppose "any barrier" across the Columbia river.

DOES YOUR TIME MEAN
 MONEY? If So Act Now

Sedan is not to be had every day, neither are the other prizes which will go to the contestants for their efforts during the next few weeks. The summing up of this great big circulation contest is that your "time can be money" to you if you will only take notice of your opportunity and make the most of it. By entering this contest your time will be money in every sense of the word.

What are you going to do about it? Will you be the laggard and let some one else win these prizes which mean money in each case? Will you have it said of you by your friends that "she merely works, she does not really do things."

If that is as far as you can see, why you will not have taken interest in this big campaign, otherwise you have been out among your friends telling them of the wonderful opportunities that are now presented to you, and that you intend to take advantage of them and that you intend to make your time mean something to you; that you will not be wasteful of your time; and that at the end of the contest, when the counting of he votes has been started by some of Salem's business men, you will be able to say that you have done your best and that your time, which means money to you, has not been wasted.

Take this idea to yourself and then go ahead. Are you going to make the try? Remember tomorrow night 8 p. m. closes second vote period and votes decrease.

remarkably like Lincoln's. When the late Warren G. Harding was president, George de Paballe of Brooklyn, N. Y., was often pointed out by startled passers-by as the chief executive.

Many doubles of the Prince of Wales have been discovered, but the one said to resemble the British heir most closely is J. A. Garrow, an assistant purser on a great ocean liner. The resemblance of James H. McCabe, a Brooklyn attorney, to the late Woodrow Wilson, has been commented on often.

Attracting almost as wide interest as Professor van Beemmel's theories are the recent experiments made by Dr. O. E. Mandoloff, of Russia. By color solutions and blood tests, this savant is said to have been able to diagnose with startling accuracy the dominating racial ancestry of men he has never seen. At a recent clinic he examined blood samples from 202 persons of various races and nationalities, and without seeing the subjects is said to have diagnosed correctly the race to which each belonged.

Yvelyn Beath who is the youngest active candidate in the contest tells us that when her subscribers meet her on the street, they recognize her and tip their hats to her.

Yesterday Evelyn said she had a prospect in the paper mill. The Contest Editor suggested that she go and get him. She took it literally and went right down to the paper mill and got her man, brought him up to the Statesman office, took his money away from him, gave him a receipt, and told him she would call on him again before the contest closed. The best part of it was, this man was very well pleased with the way Evelyn made the solicitation. Evelyn is only twelve years old but she surely is a wonder for her age.

Practical Gowns Crowding
 Tinsel Garb Out of Vogue
 HOLLYWOOD. — Theatrical gowns—those filmy, draped-on, incidental creations that have sparkled behind the footlights for a century and more—are passe, so far as their use in motion picture productions is concerned.

In their place have come more practical garments—practical because they may be used for street wear and for occasions other than before the camera. The fashion creators of Paramount Pictures are authority for this, and they go so far as to say that the gowns of nowadays are fashioned for purposes other than to fit the wearer for the part she interprets. It is their opinion that the feminine fan of today leans heavily on the picture-house for advance tips on the latest in style.

Gowns used in production, therefore, must reflect the style of the moment, but they also must be practical and an intelligent prediction of the fashion to come.

There are still some chateaufers who have yet to learn that gas and booze won't mix.

PROHIBITION FIGHT
 RAGES IN CONGRESS

Contending Forces Take Pot Shots at Each Other From Vantage Points

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(By Associated Press.)—The prohibition battle which has raged so fiercely during recent weeks in congress, developed today a trend toward amping, with leaders of the contending wet and dry forces taking pot shots at each other from points of vantage.

But while this was going on, the subject did not lie dormant in the senate and house for the senate judiciary committee got rid of a batch of troublesome modification bills by shifting the job of handling them to a sub-committee which probably will hold public hearings; the house heard a brief opinion about the extent of drinking in Georgia and Representative Oliver, democrat, New York, put in another beer and wine bill.

The Anti-Saloon League's executive committee opened the firing today with a statement assailing the accuracy of newspaper polls now being conducted over the country of the prohibition question and advising drys not to participate. Tonight Wayne B. Wheeler, the league's general counsel took his post before a radio microphone to drive home the argument. The attitude on the part of the league committee brought into action Representative Cellar, a New York democrat, who said he felt it necessary to "nail as a lie" the assertion by the committee that friends of prohibition usually do not participate in such polls, and he cited such instances which he said proved the contrary.

The league committee said straw votes registering a wet trend often were overturned when the real voting began, but Mr. Cellar asserted the league "knows it is defeated and like a whipped dog now has its tail between its legs." He also ventured the opinion that while some people "may be guilty of moral turpitude, the Anti-Saloon league is guilty of moral turpitude."

The league statement which was signed by Bishop Thomas Nicholson and eighteen others declared the "irreconcilable and thirsty" minority always was most active in straw balloting and Mr. Wheeler in his radio talk declared the majority had spoken for the prohibition issue "not in straw votes but in official ballots."

He also argued that wines and beer keep live the alcoholic appetite and develop the taste for strong beverages. The question of drinking in Georgia was brought up by Representative Tinkham, republican, Massachusetts, who read a letter he said had been sent to Representative Upshaw, democrat, Georgia, by M. B. Melhorn, governor of the federal reserve bank at Atlanta.

"Drinking is almost universal in almost every town in Georgia and throughout the south," the letter said, adding that it "is not always good Scotch, but native corn."

COUNTY TO AID PRUNES

Court Will Help Finance OAC Fruit Survey

County court has definitely agreed to help in the prune survey already begun in Marion county by Oregon Agricultural College. The court will give $200 toward the work.

Salem chamber of commerce will give $100 and the business men of the city will give the other $200 necessary to make up the $500 needed for the survey. From time to time as is needed the county court will pay its share through the chamber of commerce. OAC is the only agency to be dealt with in the survey. That something must be done to save the prunes is generally agreed by those interested. The prevailing opinion is that the trees have lost their vitality. OAC will experiment all year in an attempt to find definitely a way to "stage a comeback" for the prunes.

TARIFF COMMISSION PROBE NOW SOUGHT

Senate to Investigate Charges That Influence Was Brought to Bear

WASHINGTON, March 11.—(By Associated Press.)—Investigation of the tariff commission and of charges that President Coolidge and others have sought to influence it was ordered today by the senate. The inquiry will be conducted by a special committee of five senators—one republican insurgent, two regular republicans and two democrats. The committee will be selected by Vice President Dawes after consultation with the leaders.

There was little opposition to a general inquiry as originally proposed by the democratic leader, Senator Robinson of Arkansas, but the proposal to investigate specifically all efforts to influence the official acts of the commission met stubborn resistance from administration senators.

The proposal was put forward as an amendment by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, who recently laid before the senate a series of letters from members and former members of the commission alleging efforts at executive influence. The senate approved it 38 to 30, with a combination of democrats and republican insurgents constituting the majority.

There was another fight when Senator King, democrat, Utah, proposed that the insurgent republicans be given representation on the investigating committee. Senator Bingham, republican, Connecticut, moved simply to appoint "three republicans and two democrats," but the senate voted him down, 41 to 29. Officials of the senate were unable to recall another instance where appointment of insurgents to an investigating committee had been ordered by resolution.

GOLF COURSE IS SEEDED

This nine hole course will be opened for play by August 1, according to present plans. A crew is now working re-seeding the property. Officials are debating whether to use the Old English farm house, after remodeling, as a club house, or to construct a new building.

IRISH LEADER RESIGNS

DE VALERA QUITS FOLLOWING ADVERSE BALLOTING

DUBLIN, March 11.—(By Associated Press.)—Eamonn De La Valera, leader of the republicans, resigned today. His resignation was in answer to the vote of the Ard Fheis, or republican national assembly, defeating his proposal that republican representatives in the Irish Free State and Ulster parliaments should be permitted to take their seats when the oaths of these bodies requiring an expression of allegiance to the Irish constitution and fidelity to the British king were removed.
