Marion County Association Gets Under a Full Head of Steam

The honey luncheon and meeting for permanent organization of the Marion County Bee Keeper's association yesterday afternoon was a great success. It was at the Salem Chamber of Commerce commencing at 2 and lasting till 3. The members talked and transacted their business while they ate.

They elected J. T. Whittig of Salem president, J. Peimulder of Woodburn first vice-president, G. William Hickman of Salem second vice president, and Kenneth Russell of Turner secretary-treasurer. These are the permanent officers.

Those who had not already done so signed the membership roll, and all signed a petition to the county court for the appointment of a Marion county bee inspector to have charge of inspecting apiaries and enforcing the laws against bee diseases.

Professor H. S. Scullen of the Oregon Agricultural college talked shop and answered numerous questions.

Then the meeting adjourned to the apary of President J. T. Whittig, 690 North Summer street, where Prof. Scullen conducted a demonstration, and many more questions were asked and answered.

This was by far the most successful meeting yet held by the Marion county bee keepers. Every part of the county was well represented. The fully organized as-favorable conditions.

CONSTANT CURLING, WAVING DRIES LIFE FROM HAIR

Girls must curl and wave bobbed hair to appear their prettiest. But constant curling and waving burn and dry the luster, vitality and very life from the hair.

To offset these bad effects, just get a 35-cent bottle of delightful refreshing "Dandarine" at any drug store or toilet counter and just see for yourself how quickly it revives dry, brittle, lifeless, and fading hair.

"Dandarine" is a dependable tonic and will do wonders for any girl's hair. It nourishes, stimulates and strengthens each single hair, bringing back that youthful gleam, glint and vigorous luxuriance. Falling hair stops and dandruff disappears. "Dandarine" is pleasant and easy to use.—Adv.

citizen of Plymouth expressed long before his death that his funeral service should be without ostentation and his wishes were respected. The service was held in the tiny parlor of the farm house, with folding doors opening into a sitting room as tiny. The dark gray casket, banked with flowers stood but a few feet from the spot where Colonel Coolidge stood early one morning to administer to his son the oath of office as president. In the same room six years ago, the funeral services were held for the Colonel's wife, stepmother of the president.

A bank of lilies from the president lay on the casket and beside them was a spray of pink roses from Mrs. Coolidge. Other pieces tributes from government officials and friends and organizations in which the Colonel was active, banked the side of the room.

The little rooms, thrown into one, were filled when Captain Adolphus Andrews, commander of the Mayflower, guided the presidential family and a few close friends to seats beside the casket. Governor and Mrs. Billings of Vermont, former Governor William Stockney, on whose staff Colonel Coolidge served, Attorney General Sargent and Major James F. Coupal, White House physician were among those grouped near the casket. Relatives and neighbors packed the small space within the house and overflowed to the porch.

The president and Mrs. Coolidge and their son sat with bowed heads as the clergyman, wearing the vestments of his office, read the prescribed service. The latest revision was used, a little warmer and more hopeful in its tone than the one formerly used by the Episcopal church. There were three psalms, the Lesson, the Creed and the Lord's Prayer, and several additional prayers.

Many who had spent their lives in the hamlet where for four score years Coolidge was the leading figure and strove in vain to maintain the traditional repression of their kind as the clergyman read the selected passages. One of the psalms was the 121st, beginning: "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills."

"Lord let me know mine end," was the first line of another, while the fourth began with the words, "The Lord is my light and my salvation." The Lesson was from the epistle to the Corinthians beginning: "Now is Christ risen from the dead." A short service ended, the presidential group passed to another room while six guardsmen carried the casket to the waiting hearse and the procession to the cemetery began.

Rev. Mr. White, with fur coat thrown over his vestments, rode first in a snowmobile, in the back of which many of the floral pieces were heaped. Then came the hearse, mounted on runners and drawn by two black horses, the six body bearers on foot, and the presidential party in a three spatted sleigh.

The president wore a silk hat. Attorney General Sargent accompanied the family in their sleigh. The procession passed slowly down a roadway shoveled out of deep drifts and with high snow banks on either side.

Scores followed on foot to the little cemetery.

As the clergyman uttered the brief committal service, while the president stood with bowed head, those looking on recalled another scene of sorrow less than two years ago when the presidential family came to the hillside cemetery. In July 1924, the president and Mrs. Coolidge came to the ancestral home in order that their son Calvin might be buried here.

A snowstorm which had raged from early morning had passed as the mourners gathered about the grave, and a wintry wind swept down from the mountains. The scores who looked on from the road beneath the hill shivered in the chilly blast. The words of the clergyman could be heard clearly as the casket was lowered to its resting place.

"Earth to earth, ashes to ashes, dust to dust." Immediately after the interment the president returned with Mrs. Coolidge and their son to the white farm house. After a brief stay the party left by sleigh for Woodstock, where the presidential train awaited for the return trip to Washington.

dents concerning the final location of evil and good, so is here difference of opinion concerning immortality.

"After death we continue to live on bodily in another world." True, 2; false, 90.

"After death we continue to live on, not bodily, but as souls or spirits." True, 86; false, 12.

"After death the soul may be reborn into this world in another body." True, 5; false, 88.

"Death is the absolute end of individual existence." True, 12; false, 84.

Who is Christ? This, also, is asked of the students.

"Christ is the divine son of God." True, 98; false, 3.

"Christ was born of the Virgin Mary." True, 95; false, 4.

"Christ rose bodily from the dead after the third day." True, 80; false, 15.

"The acceptance of Christ as the Son of God necessitates a belief in his Virgin Birth." True, 55; false, 34.

"Christ is only a myth." True, 18; false, 81. This last view was the cause of considerable discussion as to whether or not students know the meaning of the word, myth.

But however a man may look on Christ, or for that matter, the Christian religion, few there are who deny the existence entirely of some Divine Being. What, then, is God?

"God is like a big man, with eyes that see everything we do, and ears that hear everything we say." True, 15; false, 75.

"God is an intelligent Personality." True, 63; false, 31.

"God is only a creation of man's mind." True, 2; false, 97.

"God did not create the world." True, 1; false, 99.

"God lives in Heaven with His Angels and Saints." True, 57; false, 33.

"God and Nature are one and the same; hence, by worshipping Nature we worship God." True, 22; false, 63.

"God does not exist at all." True, none; false, 95.

Fact of existence of God having been universally admitted by the students, how about the interpreting Deity or Devil?

"The Devil is like a big man, possessing horns and a tail." True, 9; false, 89.

"The Devil has neither form nor size, but is the dominating Spirit of Bad and Evil in mankind." True, 83; false, 12.

"The Devil is an evil personality." True, 51; false, 40.

"The Devil is only a creation of man's mind." True, 14; false, 77.

"The Devil does not exist at all." True, 10; false, 76.

Rev. Taylor has the following to say concerning the matter on which he will speak this evening:

"While I wrote that they believed that Christ was only a myth, it must have been with a lack of understanding of the word 'myth' for they also wrote that they believed he was the Son of God and born of the Virgin Mary."

"The examination showed a great majority who held the true beliefs of the Christian religion and confessed a loyalty to the standards of evangelistic faith."

At the close of the sermon this evening a number of stereopticon pictures of the events in the last week of Christ's life will be shown.

GRAND JUNCTION, Colo., March 20.—Milton Gifford, local sportsman, will offer buttermilk fed angle worms to trout in western Colorado this season. Gifford has filled a tub half full of the crawlers and is "conditioning them on buttermilk and coffee grounds," which he avers, will make them not only more appetizing to the finny tribe but tougher and better able to withstand the hungry lunges of the fish.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regulate" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each
