Miss Cecil Schreyer of Portland was appointed a member of the state board for the registration and examination of nurses. She will succeed Emily Sanders of Portland. Both appointments were announced by Governor Pierce.

Bits For Breakfast

Were you April fooled?
 Watch Salem grow. New stores and new homes in every direction.
 That they will all be needed. The extra forces at the paper mill, both linen factories, the canneries, and in nearly every other industrial line; and these all bring new forces into the commercial field, and all other fields.
 This all means 5000 or more people in Salem; and it will be 10,000 more before long.
 Dry times in California. Dry times in southern Oregon, especially in Jackson county. The big thing down that way is water. The lack of it makes gray hairs.
 This all suggests that Salem should allow no time to be wasted in getting the water system in the hands of the city; then going out after a permanent supply of mountain water, brought in by gravitation. Future Salemites may have to pay dearly for any delays of the present.

Home for Aged Farmers in Iowa Has Had Few Tenants

DAVENPORT, Iowa.—A home for the relief of aged farmers that has virtually gone begging for tenants for thirty-four years is located here.
 It is the Fejervary Home for Old Farmers, endowed by the late Nicholas Fejervary, Hungarian patriot and exile, whose love for his adopted country prompted him to leave a good share of his fortune for the relief of aged farmers.
 Count Fejervary thought there might be many old farmers who would want to enter the home un-

THE SOUL'S IMMORTAL TOWERS
 Set thy desires more high. The buildings fade away. Because thou buildest clay. Now make the fabric sure. With stones that will endure! Hewn from the spiritual rock. The immortal towers of the soul.
 At Death's dissolving touch shall mock. And stand secure while aeons roll.
